Total Blockade of Holy Land Invoked

Red Delegate Hurls Charge Of 'Insult' At Byrnes

Row Over Debate On Italy Ended As U. S. Secretary Finds Agenda Error

Paris, Aug. 12 (AP).—Soviet Delegate Andrei Y. Vishinsky hurled a charge of "insult" tonight at United States Secretary of State Byrnes during a heated argument over continuation of debate on Italy's declaration to the 21-Nation peace conference.

The bitter argument was resolved soon afterwards when Byrnes discovered an error in the agenda. The Russians had insisted on continuation of the debate after the Yugoslav delegate, replying to Premier Alcide de Gasperi's Saturday speech for Italy, assailed Italian claims to disputed Venezia Giulia and implored the delegates to make no concessions to "the policy of Italian imperialism."

Yields to Soviet Demands

Byrnes, who assumed the chairmanship of the conference today, had ruled earlier that under previously adopted procedure, general debate on the cases of former enemy countries should be deferred, but he yielded to Russian demands by assuring that a motion for general debate would be entertained. Only then, after an hour's debate, could the Yugoslav delegate take the floor.

When the delegate finished his speech, Vishinsky charged that Byrnes' ruling against a general debate was "an infraction of all the rules and an insult to the Soviet Union."

"There must be no infringement of the right of freedom of speech," Vishinsky said. "I consider this an infringement and an insult to the Soviet Union. I insist that this insult not be maintained and that full debate be opened."

Byrnes Agrees Promptly

Byrnes consulted the minutes of last Saturday's plenary session when the action on general debates was taken, and agreed promptly that the secretariat had erred in its preparation of the agenda. He scheduled further debate on the Italian declaration for tomorrow, and shortly before the long session was recessed, promised that the name of Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov would be placed on the agenda for an address in reply to the Italian case.

"I hold that the agenda prepared by the secretariat was not in accord with the official stenographic report," Byrnes said. "Therefore it will not be necessary for a vote on the conference to continue the debate."

The Yugoslav delegate, Vice Premier Edward Kardelj, made a long and impassioned appeal to the conference to hold the Italian state as such, and not Fascism alone, responsible for Italy's part in the war.

Rapid Strides Made

The day's proceedings were marked by protracted arguments, but some rapid strides were made. The conference voted unanimously to invite Albania, Cuba, Mexico and Egypt to give their views on the Italian treaty, although they spent hours debating the rules which should govern these appearances.

The delegates also made an important step forward with the election of a permanent secretariat and a permanent conference general secretary.

Kardelj's speech was delayed a full hour by the argument between Byrnes and Vishinsky. Four times the American Secretary called upon the Yugoslav delegate to present his rebuttal of De Gasperi's Saturday address, and four times points of order stalled the proceedings, with both Dardelj and

U. S. Is 7th Nation To Recognize New Bolivian Regime

Undersecretary of State Acheson yesterday announced United States recognition of the Government of Bolivia which came into power July 17 in a bloody revolution.

The new government is composed of a three-man junta of university professors headed by acting President Dr. Nestor Guillen.

Acheson's announcement said several American governments had granted recognition "and it is understood that others are taking similar action."

The junta has already given assurances it will abide by Bolivia's international obligations, has recalled all political exiles and plans to hold general elections soon.

Venezuela, Cuba, Uruguay, Chile, Peru and Paraguay have extended recognition. Those which have not yet acted include Argentina.

Polio Strikes 5 Children in Nearby Areas

Prince Georges Reports 20 Cases, Same As In Previous 'Worst Year'

Five more children from nearby counties have been stricken with infantile paralysis, local health officials announced yesterday.

The year's total for the Washington area now is 41, 20 of them having been brought in from Prince Georges County.

The Prince Georges County total now equals the figure for the corresponding date in 1944, previously the county's worst year.

At this time last year, 38 out-of-town and 41 District cases were recorded. The 41 cases this year include only four persons living in the District.

Arlington Girl Victim

The new cases include a 14-year-old girl from the 1600 block of N. Fort Myer dr., Arlington, Va., admitted to Gallinger Hospital last Friday, and the following patients at Children's Hospital: 5-year-old boy from the first block of Hillside rd., Greenbelt, Md.; 10-year-old boy from the 6800 block of Exfair rd., Bethesda, Md.; 12-year-old girl from Falls Church, Va.; and 3-year-old boy from Fairfax Station, Va.

Included in the total announced yesterday was a 5-year-old Greenbelt, Md., boy who lives in the same block—the first block of Hillside rd.—as a 2-year-old girl admitted to Children's Hospital August 5.

Seven Cases in Greenbelt

Greenbelt with 4000 children leads the communities in Prince Georges County with seven cases. Berwyn has three, Hyattsville and East Pines have two each and Riverdale, East Riverdale, Cheverly, Ritchie, Colmar Manor and Lanham each have one.

Prince Georges County had 72 cases in 1944, according to Dr. John Byers, county health officer. In 1944 there were 16 cases in July, 20 in August, 25 in September, 10 in October and 1 in November.

Last year the total was 29 cases. The second worst year was 1941 with 51 polio victims. It was pointed out that there were no polio cases in 1942 and only one in 1943.

Fields Says He 'Forgot' Who Got Fee

Promises He'll Try To Identify Man He Paid $1840 in Wire Screen Deal

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Benjamin F. Fields, war surplus broker, swore yesterday that he had forgotten the name of a man who got a $1480 fee from him just two months ago.

Fields told the House Surplus Committee he would try to find out who got the money. The $1480 was part of $4442 that Fields made on $8085 worth of wire screen he bought from the War Assets Administration—without putting up a penny of his own.

Fields has sent the WAA bids for a million dollars worth of goods, but says he got only about $25,000 worth.

The committee spent all yesterday on the wire screen deal. These things came out:

1. Fields once offered $800 apiece for 181 ice units but William J. Gilrein, a WAA general manager, told the promoter he could get them for $295. The difference was more than $90,000.
2. Gilrein handled Fields' bid for the wire screen.
3. Under the rules, Fields was not entitled to any screen but he got 53,900 feet of it.
4. Gilrein was fired last week. He is due before the committee today for questioning about the Fields deal.
5. Fields often clashed with committee members and would not tell his prewar business because it might incriminate him.

Hugh D. Wise, jr., the committee general counsel, called Fields to the witness stand as the committee started trying to find out why go-betweens and middle men are able to milk the public of millions of dollars a day in commissions on goods sold by the WAA.

Some 12 or 15 billion dollars of war surplus already have been sold and the WAA hopes to sell about that much more by next July 1.

Was an "Expediter"

Fields told the committee he set up a public relations business here in 1941. He said he was an "expediter" for businessmen who wanted things from the Government. He said he had many friends, but they did not help him, that he made his own entrees with the departments.

When Representative Rizley (R., Okla.) asked what Fields did before that, the promoter claimed his constitutional right not to tell. His prewar business had nothing to do with the WAA, said Fields, and besides that might incriminate him.

Fields was in the penitentiary for mail fraud from 1930 until 1938, when he was paroled. He started his business here with desk space in a downtown office and has worked up to an air-conditioned suite on Connecticut ave.

Entirely by Chance, He Says

Fields stumbled upon the WAA's wire screen by chance, he said, when he went to Richmond, Va., to look at some bulldozers for a client several months ago. He sent in a bid for 999,390 feet—the exact amount the WAA had to sell—and offered the exact WAA price of 15 cents a linear foot.

Anthony J. Flood of the WAA allocation staff in Philadelphia told the House committee yesterday that Gilrein handed him Fields' order one day after he had the others that were sent in. Flood said he did not notice that Fields' order lacked a certification that the screen would be used for veterans' housing.

Fields was not entitled to any

Gen. Littlejohn Hopes to Get Surplus Job Done by July 1

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

When President Truman talked to Maj. Gen. Robert M. Littlejohn about taking over the job of administrator of the War Assets Administration, he gave him this directive:

"I want the job done honestly and expeditiously."

"Yes, sir," said Littlejohn, who formerly was Gen. Eisenhower's Chief Quartermaster in the European Theater.

Yesterday Gen. Littlejohn — or "Mister" Littlejohn, as he insists on being called now—told a meeting of regional directors about the President's directive, and announced that July 1, 1947, had been set as the "target date" for completing the major portion of WAA's task.

By that date, he said, he hopes that the sale of billions of dollars worth of war's leftovers will have been consummated, and that War Assets will have nothing more to do than administer some leases on real estate, some loans due to sales, and a minimum of stock.

It will be the biggest peacetime selling job in history over such a period of time. It will mean disposing of surplus goods valued at more that 15 billion dollars, and ranging from huge war plants to typewriters.

General Littlejohn, a South Carolinian, who used to be called "Big John" when he was champion wrestler at West Point 35 years ago, told the regional directors that Feeder Line Asks Planes To Serve D.C.

Lockheed Saturns Sought to Operate Among Big and Small Cities on East Coast

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Small cities and towns in the Central Atlantic States may be the first in the world to receive modern regional airline service linking Main Street with the Big City.

This developed yesterday when All American Aviation, Inc., announced that it was buying a fleet of new Lockheed Saturns. The twin-engined Saturn is the first transport ever built specifically designed for "feeder" airline service.

All American—a pioneer in regional air-mail pick-up—has an application before the Civil Aeronautics Board to run passenger and freight service to 121 cities and small town in Maryland, Virginia, District of Columbia, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Ohio, West Virginia and North Carolina.

If granted, All American plans to start de luxe airline service by the middle of next year, President Robert M. Love announced yesterday.

Small Cities on Routes

Under the pending application, the "feeder" airline would run into Washington and Baltimore. Small cities on the proposed passenger routes include Cumberland, Frederick, Hagerstown and the principal small cities of Eastern Shore, Md., Radford and Pulaski, Va., and many resort cities of New Jersey and Delaware are also on the proposed routes.

All American probably will not be the first regional airline to begin passenger service. Several lines in the West, planning to operate surplus DC-3's purchased from the Army, almost certainly will be in operation before that company.

But the company has contracted to buy the first of the new Saturns. Five are to be delivered early next year, with an option for an additional 20 of the planes.

The Saturn is a 14-passenger transport with a top speed of 250 miles an hour. First flown two months ago, it has numerous design features built into the plane after intensive research into the regional transport field by Lockheed engineers.

Visibility Improved

Company representatives traveled 22,000 miles interviewing merchants, bankers, farmers and housewives in the smaller cities and rural communities. They sought to find what kind of an airplane Main Street needed.

The result is a plane giving very much better visibility for passengers than other airliners. Capable of operating from airports with runways down to 3180 feet, it is also more simple to maintain mechanically. It is designed both for conventional passenger and cargo operations and high-speed pickup of airmail in flight.

Swedish Army Investigating Rocket Mystery

Stockholm, Sweden, Aug. 12 (U.P.).—The Swedish army today rushed experts to three points in central Sweden where unidentified rockets, rumored to be the results of Russian experiments, crashed last night.

The barrage, witnessed by hundreds of Swedes, was the heaviest since the mysterious missiles first were seen flashing through Swedish skies on May 24. Since then similar missiles have been reported sighted in Finland, Denmark and Norway.

Unconfirmed rumors said the Russians were experimenting with rockets and flying bombs, probably launching them from some point in Estonia on the Baltic, but the Swedish army clamped a tight blackout on the results of its investigation.

One Lands North of Stockholm

One of the rockets passed directly over Stockholm and crashed north of the city. Three others were reported to have exploded in central Sweden.

First reports from army investigators indicated they had found nothing, leading to the theory that the bomb exploded in the air with such fury that little or nothing was left.

A Swedish air force lieutenant estimated the body length at about 20 meters (65 feet). He said the bomb was shaped like a cigar, with a green foremost projecting part and white sides. He said it moved at exceptionally low altitude with terrific speed.

One eyewitness said fragments rained down after a great blast in the air above him. Previous ex-

200 Speeding Tickets Given In Maryland

State, Local Police Join District Drive To Curb Accidents

State and local police in neighboring Maryland joined the District in cracking down on speedsters over the weekend, handing out nearly 200 tickets for traffic violations.

The majority of tickets were for exceeding speed limits. They were handed to incautious motorists by State Police of the Waterloo, Md., barracks and local police in Prince Georges County.

The county drive, urged at a meeting of town mayors last week, augmented Washington's own crackdown ordered last week by George E. Keneipp, District traffic director, and the Metropolitan Police Department.

New developments locally to lessen traffic hazards include a survey of traffic standards, expected to begin next Monday as a primary assignment for Wallace L. Braun, new deputy director of traffic and institution of a new system for curbing driving privileges of "accident repeaters."

Clerk Checks Records

Arthur E. Miller, Police Inspector in the traffic division, announced the new system yesterday. A clerk, he said, has already begun checking accident records to weed out those of motorists involved in two or more accidents within 12 months.

Inspector Miller designated August 1, 1945, as the starting date for multiple violation action. Those charged with responsibility of two or more accidents, he said, will have their records examined, along with any record they may have of traffic violations not involving accident.

All such records, he said, will be turned over to the Board of Revocation and Restoration, for its review and action. According to an agreement with Keneipp, the Inspector declared, the board will summon the motorists to appear for interviews and possible reexamination.

Chart Issued on Stopping

In an effort to educate motorists, the District's Accident Investigation Unit yesterday released a prepared chart listing the distances required to come to a full stop under normal conditions. The table was prepared for an average reaction time of 75 seconds and for brakes that meet minimum requirements of the Uniform Vehicle Code.

The chart shows that at 10 miles per hour a car travels 18.5 feet before it can be halted; at 30 miles per hour the distance is 100.5, and at 60 the car, traveling 88 feet per second, goes 66 feet before the driver depresses the brake and an additional 270 feet braking distance is consumed before the vehicle is fully halted.

The inquest into the death of William Friess, 65, of 1106 N. Edgewood st., Arlington, who was the sole fatality in the Memorial Bridge bus plunge on August 2, has been indefinitely postponed, it was announced yesterday by Lieut. William J. Liverman, AIO chief.

Drive Centers on Route 1

The inquest was expected to start Thursday. Its postponement was necessary, Liverman said, because neither the bus driver nor the driver of the sedan which precipitated the bus over the bridge side "is in condition to testify." He also stated that many of the 37 originally hospitalized after the plunge were still in no condition to appear.

The Maryland antispeeding drive was concentrated on Route 1, main traffic artery from Washington to Baltimore and points North. State police patrolled the route through

OPA Allows Average Rise Of $82 a Car

7.3% Hike Puts Retail Ceilings About 22 Per Cent Above Those of 1942

By the Associated Press

Retail ceilings on new automobiles climbed to about 22 per cent above 1942 prices yesterday as OPA authorized fresh increases ranging from $62 to $322 a car.

The new price increases, effective immediately, are the first of at least two general price hikes required by the new price control act. Another increase amounting to about 5 per cent will be put into effect soon, OPA officials said.

Yesterday's increases over June 30 ceilings average 7.3 per cent, or $82 a car. They restore dealers' peacetime profit margins, as ordered by Congress. These margins had been trimmed by OPA to prevent the full amount of manufacturers' price increases from being passed on the public.

Range From $62 to $322

The retail price boost of about 5 per cent still to come will restore dealers' handling charges to the prewar level.

On four-door sedan models, yesterday's increases range from $69 for a Chevrolet Stylemaster to $293 on a Cadillac. On all models, OPA said, the increase range is from $62 on a Chevrolet business coupe to $322 on a Cadillac 7-pasenger Imperial sedan.

In each case yesterday's increases are over June 30 ceilings.

The average 7.3 per cent price hike was the fourth general increase in auto ceilings since last November. The total of the three previous increases averaged 15 per cent, OPA said.

The first of the earlier increases was granted to cover the climb in production costs up to last fall; the second offset industry wage increases granted early this year, while the third followed higher prices authorized last February for steel and other materials.

Retail List Increases

In its announcement, OPA listed new ceilings for only four-door sedans.

The new ceilings for four-door sedans, together with the increase involved in each case, are shown in the following table:

Truman Gets Compromise Palestine Plan

U. S. Proposal Reaches Desk Just Before British 'Crackdown'

By the Associated Press

An American compromise plan to end Arab-Jewish strife in Palestine was reported unofficially to have reached President Truman's desk yesterday only a few hours before Britain served notice she will crack down on future illegal entries to the Holy Land.

Acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson hurried to the White House as anxiety mounted here over the necessity of easing the potentially explosive mid-eastern situation.

It is understood upon the principle of partition of the Holy Land the plan as now drafted was reported to call for:

1. Creation of a Jewish zone of approximately 1800 square miles—approximately 300 greater than proposed in the plan originally offered in London and subsequently disapproved by President Truman.

2. A United States contribution of 300 million dollars to raise the economic-social-educational standards of the Arab states. Of this sum, 50 million dollars would be earmarked for the Arabs in Palestine.

3. Wide latitude for the Jews to control immigration within their own zone.

It was learned from unofficial sources that this plan has been shown to the British government on a tentative basis, and that the British government objected to unrestricted immigration as leading to overcrowding and an outbreak of violence.

At the same time, some Administration quarters here felt a 300 million dollar appropriation might run into tough sledding on Capitol Hill.

Mussolini's Body Found in Trunk At Pavia Monastery

Milan, Italy, Aug. 12 (AP).—The body of Benito Mussolini has been found in a trunk hidden in the Pavia Monastery near Milan and is now in police custody, a police statement said tonight.

The corpse had been hidden in the Monastery of St. Angelo until yesterday morning, the police report said.

Then, according to the statement, the same persons who had taken the body there moved it to Pavia Monastery where its presence was disclosed by a monk.

The body immediately was brought to police offices here.

Britain Acts To Prevent Civil War In Palestine

Will Cause More Misery but Won't Stop Illegal Entry, Jewish Leader Says

London, Aug. 12 (AP).—Britain declared tonight civil war threatened in the Holy Land and invoked a total blockade against illegal Jewish immigration.

Bitter reaction followed immediately, with one Jewish leader declaring the decision would result in "much more suffering—but it won't stop the stream of immigrants."

Palestine itself was an armed camp as the British government announced that illegal immigrants attempting to enter Palestine would be interned at Cyprus or elsewhere until the problem was settled.

All Possible Steps Taken

All possible steps to halt the flow of immigrants at the source have been taken, the government said, including "urgent representations" to governments of countries from which thousands of refugees are dispatched by what the statement called a "highly organized" Zionist-financed movement. Palestine authorities were instructed that "the reception of illegal immigrants must cease."

As the British decision was made known, rigid military restrictions were clamped on Palestine. Tankled Tommies streamed into key ports of disembarkation. Barbed wire ringed streets and government buildings.

Off heavily guarded Haifa Harbor lay the British cruiser Ajax and British destroyers. Two empty troopships were anchored in the harbor—possibly for use in deporting thousands of uncertified refugees who have arrived in the past two weeks.

Detention Camp Completed

RAF patrols droned over the eastern Mediterranean in search of new refugee ships reported en route, and in Cyprus, the island crown colony, work was rushed on the completion of a huge detention camp.

The government announcement, said Britain could not tolerate "the attempt by a minority of Zionist extremists to exploit the sufferings of unfortunate people in order to create a situation prejudicial to a just settlement." This situation was unfair, the statement said, to the regular Jewish immigrants certified under the legal 1500 monthly quota.

The steady stream of immigrants in recent months is not, the government said, a spontaneous movement by European Jews who see their only hope in Palestine.

"Recent developments have revealed the illegal immigrant traffic as a widely ramified and highly organized movement supported by very large financial contributions from Zionist sources, which has been built up and put into operation by unscrupulous persons in an attempt to force the hand of His Majesty's Government and anticipate their decision on future policy in Palestine."

"Almost Beyond Belief"

In Paris, where the Jewish Agency Executive is conferring, Agency Chairman David Ben Gurion commented that "it is not yet sure that Mr Bevin (British Foreign Secretary) should have the last word in history," and Berl Locker, British member of the executive, predicted the decision would result in much more suffering." Mrs. Goldie Meyerson, leader of the Jewish Federation in Palestine, exclaimed, "It's almost beyond belief!"

In this charged atmosphere, the

Passenger Injured

State Department Can't Visit Plane Crew Held by Yugoslavs

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Aug. 12 (AP).—Yugoslav authorities held incommunicado today the occupants of an American C-47 Army transport plane which was forced down near Ljubljana by Yugoslav fighters last Friday.

A Yugoslav officer in charge at the scene of the crash landing refused to tell a United States State Department representative where the occupants of the plane had been interned.

Harold A. Shantz, charge d'affaires in the United States Embassy, said: "We have been given no indication as to when they will be released."

Early reports that the pilot and copilot of the plane were injured "apparently were false alarms," Shantz said. He declared that one passenger, whose nationality was unknown, was injured, and added: "All the others aboard the plane are in perfect condition."

The passengers included six United States Army personnel, one American civilian and three others—one a military man and the other two civilians. One of the latter three suffered injuries but all that is known of the identity of the trio is that they were not of American, British or French nationality.

Shantz said the State Department representative from Zagreb was told at the scene today that he could not see the interned passengers or crew members. Authorities in charge also refused to give the American representative the names of those aboard the plane but said they were "being given the best of treatment—good quarters and good food."

Text of British Palestine Statement

London, Aug. 12 (AP).—Text of the British statement on Palestine.

NO COUNTRY in the world has been a better or more consistent friend of the Jewish people than Britain.

Wherever the Jews were persecuted the voice of Britain was lifted in protest, and, wherever possible, action was taken to mitigate their lot.

When they were persecuted by Hitler, the British people not only protested most vigorously, but a large body of refugees from Nazi barbarism were received in our country. Even during the war, when our people were hard pressed for shelter and supplies, more were allowed in. Altogether 200,000 refugees—a large proportion of them Jews—landed in Britain.

It was under the British mandate that nearly 500,000 Jews settled in Palestine where a great Jewish community now exists.

When it was threatened with Nazi invasion—a terrible threat to the Palestinian Jews—British arms prevented that dread possibility.

The Jews in Palestine were given arms so that they might be equipped for their own defense against their would-be liquidators from Nazi Germany and to enable them to take a part in the common struggle. In Britain there are no pogroms; Jews enjoy all the rights of civil liberty.

Such is the record of this island, now the subject of bitter and unfair attack by many—though by no means all—Jews on account of the unhappy events in Palestine, in the course of which British soldiers, doing their duty, have been killed, wounded and kidnapped, not in open and straightforward battle, but from ambush and even in the course of hospitality. Moreover, civil servants serving Palestine no less than Britain, and ordinary quiet citizens going about their peaceful business have been the victims of outrage more worthy of Nazis than of the Jewish victims of Nazis.

Against this background His Majesty's government give the facts and their decision about the illegal immigration to Palestine which threatens both civil war and a breakdown of government in the historic land.

IN DECEMBER, 1945, the quota of 75,000 Jewish immigrants permitted to enter Palestine under the provisions of the white paper was exhausted.

Nevertheless, pending a final decision on future policy for Palestine, Hi sMajesty's Government authorized the continuance of Jewish immigration at the rate of 1500 a month. Instead of this provision being accepted pending decisions of long-term policy, there has been an increasing flow of illegal immigrants into Palestine. The numbers of these illegal immigrants have had to be set off against the monthly quotas, and those already held in camps in Palestine, or on ships in Haifa Harbor, are more than sufficient to absorb the whole quota for many months ahead. However, illegal immigrants in considerable numbers are known to be on their way to Palestine.

Moved by sympathy for the suffering of the Jewish people in Europe, His Majesty's Government have hitherto allowed illegal immigrants to land, in spite of the grave embarrassment caused to the Palestine authorities both in the administration of the quota and by the necessity for detaining in camps those whose entry was not immediately possible under the quota.

THE patience, forbearance and humanity thus shown by His Majesty's government has, however, been interpreted by those responsible for the traffic as a sign of weakness and as an encouragement to redouble their efforts to increase the flow of illegal immigrants still further.

The point has now been reached when it is clear that the present illegal traffic is not, as has been maintained, a movement arising spontaneously among the European Jews who see in Palestine their only hope for the future. Nor are those who encourage and direct it inspired solely by the sympathy which is so widely felt for suffering.

Recent developments have revealed the illegal immigrant traffic as a widely ramified and highly organized movement supported by very large financial contributions from Zionist sources, which has been built up and put into operation by unscrupulous persons in an attempt to force the hand of His Majesty's government and anticipate their decision on future policy in Palestine.

The organizers maintain a closely knit network of agents in the countries of eastern and southern Europe, by whom considerable numbers of displaced Jews are moved from points of departure as far distant as Poland down to the Mediterranean seaboard.

Thence, herded into overcrowded and unseaworthy ships with insufficient food, and in conditions of the utmost privation and squalor, they are brought across the Mediterranean inspired by a conviction carefully instilled into them that this is their only road to safety. In all this process the laws and regulations of the countries concerned are ignored; identity and ration cards, travel documents, etc., are forged on a large scale; food, clothing, medical supplies and transport, provided by UNRRA and other agencies for the relief of suffering in Europe, are diverted to the maintenance of what is openly described as the "underground railway to Palestine."

His Majesty's government have been distressed to receive reports of persecution and pogroms against Jews in eastern and southeastern Europe. It is a tragic situation that in countries which have been liberated by Allied—including British—arms and sacrifice, the very anti-Semitism against which we fought should raise its ugly head. It is to be hoped that the governments of the governments of the countries concerned will bring this shame to a sharp and decisive end.

APART from its illegality, the immigration and traffic to Palestine. The reception and guarding of large numbers of illega immigrants places a severe strain on the administration. Their arrival has greatly increased tension between the Arabs and Jewish communities in Palestine. And since there is evidence that the terrorist element among the Jews has been reinforced from the ranks of illegal immigrants, their promiscuous introduction clearly cannot be tolerated any longer.

As the mandatory power for Palestine, His Majesty's government have responsibilities towards the population of that country. It is obviously not in the interests of Palestine generally that such illegal activities should be allowed to continue.

The recent increase in illegal immigration—which sets aside consideration of priority and equity—is also operating with great unfairness towards those Jews who would otherwise have been able to enter Palestine legally under the quota and much suffering has arise from this cause.

Even Jews long resident in Palestine who have succeeded in tracing near relatives living in distressing conditions in Europe and who wish to bring them to Palestine are unable to do so because all potential legal immigration has been pushed aside by this illegal traffic. It is also a matter of concern to His Majesty's government that a large proportion of the illegal immigrants come from the countries of eastern Europe and not from the displaced persons centers in Germany, Austria and Italy, to the emptying of which the Anglo-American Committee of Inquiry attached great importance.

The continuance of this traffic at the present time is likely to have an adverse effect on the hope of a general settlement in Palestine. It is well known that His Majesty's government has accepted as a basis for negotiation a plan drawn up by British and American experts which is designed to provide for increased immigration into Palestine under conditions which would not disturb the peace and economy of the country.

FOR ALL these reasons, His Majesty's government can no longer tolerate this attempt to force their hand in framing a new policy for Palestine. They have made urgent representations to the governments of the countries from which the immigrants are despatched, in order to stop the traffic at its source. In addition, instructions have been given to the Palestine authorities that the reception into Palestine of illegal immigrants must cease.

Accordingly, immigrants arriving illegally will henceforward be conveyed to Cyprus or elsewhere and housed in camps there until a decision can be taken as to their future. Meanwhile, it is fully understood that many of the illegal immigrants concerned have come through conditions of great hardship in circumstances not under their control, and all reasonable measures will be taken for their health and well-being.

In announcing this decision, His Majesty's government wish to make it clear that, while they cannot tolerate this attempt by a minority of Zionist extremists to exploit the sufferings of unfortunate people in order to create a situation prejudicial to a just settlement, they are deeply sensible of the sufferings undergone by the Jewish community and are anxious to bring them to an end as soon as possible.

It is clear that a permanent solution of this complicated question can only be brought about if Jews and Arabs are prepared to enter discussions in a realistic and constructive spirit in order to evolve a practical scheme for harmonizing the claims of these two historic peoples.

clandestine radio of the Jewish underground organization Hagana broadcast that "British military action against us is pending," and urged Jews to "stock up on food because long curfews are ahead of us."

The broadcast said Hagana had learned the British planned to move against the Jewish resistance movement and "arrest those of our leaders yet free." It said the Jews would resist with all their strength any blockade designed to halt immigration, adding that the refugees in the harbor were accustomed "to worse things than blockades."

Members Told to Be Ready

"Be ready," Hagana admonished its members.

Inside the tense city of Haifa, a military trial opened for 22 Jewish men and women charged with attacking the railway workshops June 17. But it was recessed until tomorrow after the 18 boys and 4 girls accused sang doggedly in Hebrew for 10 minutes. The court, in the Arab sector of Haifa, was guarded by an extremely heavy concentration of British and Arab legion troops.

In Jerusalem, meanwhile, General Secretary Sholom Eisenberg of the Jewish Agency Executive announced he had asked Jerusalem's postmaster general to investigate charges that the agency's mail had been intercepted. Letters addressed to Eisenberg's staff frequently were received torn open, he said, and added that he suspected secret unofficial censorship.

The ceilings are retail list prices. They do not include Federal excise taxes, handling, and delivery charges or transportation charges.

The additional price increases required by the new law will be discussed with dealers at a conference today, OPA said. In predicting this increase will be about five per cent, officials said they hoped that would be the last boost in auto price ceilings.

However, auto manufacturers—whose ceilings were not changed by yesterday's order — are now eligible to apply for higher prices under terms of the Barkley amendment to the price control act. Whether they may qualify for increases, OPA could not say.

The Barkley amendment requires that ceilings be based on 1940 earnings, rather than 1936-39 earnings, the yardstick under the old law. However, Congress authorized OPA to deny an increase to industries where the volume of production is sub-normal but expected to climb. This is the case at present in the auto industry.

Atom Scientists Incorporate to Aid Its Use in Industry

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 12 (U.P.).—The Emergency Committee of Atomic Scientists, Inc., which described its aim as the advancement of "the use of atomic energy in ways beneficial to mankind," today filed a certificate of incorporation with the Secretary of State.

Incorporators included Physicist Albert Einstein; R. F. Bacher and Hans A. Bethe of Cornell University; Edward U. Condon of the United States Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C.; T. R. Hogness, Leo Szilard and Harold C. Urey of the University of Chicago, and V. F. Weisskots of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The certificate said the committee would seek to "diffuse knowledge and information about atomic energy."

Womna Given Divorce From Man Who ShotHer

Phoneix, Ariz., Aug. 12 (AP). Margaret Farley Wickware, former New York model, was granted a divorce today by Superior Judge Harold R. Scoville from the man charged with shooting her three times.

Reid King Wickware, 42, buffet owner and ex-convict, did not contest her charges of "excesses, outrages and cruel treatment."

New York, Aug. 12, (AP).—Trygve Lie, secretary general of the United Nations, arrived at La Guardia Field by plane today, ending an European tour.

Another passenger was John Foster Dulles, returning from the World Council of Churches.

Princ Geeorges and Howard counties, nabbing the majority of their 100 reported violators.

State Trooper Henry Ricker, of the Waterloo barracks, issued a ticket apiece to Francis S. Lee, 25, of Trenton, N. J., and William G. Smoot, 21, identified only as "an Arlington soldier," on charges of "racing."

Collateral Forfeited

Ricker said he followed the pair from Beltsville to College Park and saw them pass each other "time and again" at high speeds. Smoot forfeited $32.90 collateral and Lee relinquished his collateral of $36.45 rather than appear for hearings, State Police said.

The other 100 Maryland summons were issued by police in the metropolitan areas bounding the District of Columbia. In Hyattsville, Chief Ralph Brown prepared figures to meet possible protests on the antispeed campaign.

The Hyattsville substation of the county police, Brown said, has records showing that in the first six months of this year there were 222 traffic accidents as compared to 109 for the comparable period last year. The 1946 accident figure, he said, shows 123 persons injured and five fatalities; the same period in 1945 tallied 65 injured and two killed.

In addition to the above figures, Brown said, 22 pedestrians have been injured from January 1 to July 1, this year, as against 17 for the first six months of 1945.

Mayor E. Murray Gover, of Hyatsville, declared last night that the continuing drive had already slowed down traffic appreciably.

Some experts believe these bodies are not the bomb itself but fragments of the explosive used to propel the missiles, which supposedly are radio-directed back to their launching site after flying over Sweden.

Altitudes Vary

Witnesses said they flew at altitudes ranging from 600 to 1200 feet, but that some were much higher. Speeds were estimated as high as 600 miles an hour.

In the last public comment permitted on the missiles, Capt. G. E. Stangenberg, acting chief of the Swedish air defense department, said in reply to a question as to whether the bombs were of Russian origin: "I can't confirm that but I cannot deny it either."

A military source told local newsmen that the incidents were regarded as most serious and that Sweden was making "an all-out effort to disclose the place from whence the bombs were shot."

Richmond, Va., Aug. 12 (AP).—Dr. Joseph E. Barrett, State hospital commissioner, announced today the appointment of Dr. Granville Jones of Marlboro, N. J., as superintendent of Eastern State Hospital at Williamsburg.

CONFER

Vishinsky calling for full general debate on the Italian declaration.

Kardelj struck out vigorously against Italy's claims in Venezia Giulia, disputed area which includes the strategic Adriatic port of Trieste.

Offered Same Armaments

"Already before the first World War Italy claimed Dalmatia with exactly the same arguments with which she is now backing her demands for the Julian March," he said, speaking in rapid Russian.

Italy, he said, grabbed Fiume in 1920 by an "act of violence," adding that "Fascism came to power precisely for the purpose of giving full vent to the growth of all imperialistic ambitions."

"This is the line of development of the Italian policy of aggression," he said. "It is evident that it is a continuous line. It is not only Mussolini or former fascist Italy who bear the responsibility for the war, but the Italian state as such."

Kardelj said that de Gasperi, who urged postponement of decisions on border problems for a year, was using tactics identical with those used in Italian diplomacy after the first World War, and that "the question arises" whether the coincidence "can be considered purely fortuitous."

Claims Special Right

"Yugoslavia, which suffered so much from the attack of the Italian aggressors, has a special right to ask her Allies to afford her protection against a renewal of aggression and national oppression on the part of Italy."

The delegates elected French delegate Jacques DuPare secretary general of the conference, a position he held in a temporary capacity.

The delegates decided that the secretariat should consist of eight members, including one each from the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France.

Britain's slate for the other four members—Australia, Brazil, China and Yugoslavia—was adopted after an argument over Australia, characterized by Vishinsky as a "temperamental member of our meeting." Vishinsky attempted to substitute Ethiopia as "a calmer state." The slate was adopted without a vote, but Vishinsky insisted upon putting his opposition to Australia into the record, after both Norway and Ethiopia had declined nomination.

The selection of the permanent secretariat cleared the way for meetings of commissions which will write the treaty recommendations to be presented to the plenary sessions. The commission dealing with the Italian draft treaty was to organize tonight.

Disagreement Almost Complete

Paris, Aug. 12 (U.P.).—A British spokesman today said there is almost complete disagreement between Russia and the other major powers on a statute for the Trieste free zone.

At the same time, an informed American observer said Italian Premier Alcide de Gasperi might win "by default" the chief point in his address before the Paris Peace Conference—postponement of action on Trieste.

U. S. Ships Captain Says Visibility Goo During Collision

New York, Aug. 12 (U.P.).—The captain and the helmsman of the U. S. Lines ship American Farmer told a Coast Guard board of inquiry today that visibility was good the night of July 31, when the vessel collided with the freighter William J. Riddle 750 miles off the British coast.

The American Farmer was abandoned but stayed afloat and became the object of a salvage dispute between British and American shipowners.

The helmsman said he had no warning of the approach of the Riddle.

Capt. A. S. Cronin said his ship had a 40-foot hole in the bow and was taking water fast when he ordered the lifeboats away.

Chicago, Aug. 12, (AP). — More than 150 persons offered their skin today and gave four-year-old Melvyn Snyder a chance to live.

The child suffered serious burns May 27 when his pajamas caught fire. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Snyder, asked newspapers to spread an appeal after doctors could find no more skin to cover the child's burns. The parents themselves had given 165 square inches of skin.

screen without the certification, Flood said. But he and three million-foot bidders got 53,900 feet each.

Other Discrepancies

Not only did Fields have no certification, Flood said, but he failed to say whether he was a wholesaler or retailer and he did not pay for the goods until after the 10-day time limit had passed.

Flood said also that the screen was sold under old rules because the Philadelphia WAA office could not understand a new rule book issued in Washington. Counsel Wise said Fields and other big bidders would not have gotten any wire under the new rules, even if their orders were in the right form.

Filed's order said the wire was for Baumrin Bros. of New York but that firm did not take the wire and the promoter offered it to the other brokers in Washington.

Offer Passed On

Mrs. Ruby V. Etty testified he offered it to her and she passed the offer on to Gerald F. Stack and Robert G. Cummings. They told the committee they tried to sell it to May Hardware Co., in Washington. The deal fell through when Fields asked to be paid without delivering the wire for several days.

Fields said Attorney Howard Payne came to him with an offer to sell the wire to C. B. Warr, an Oklahoma dealer. Warr paid the WAA $8085 for the wire and Fields $4442.

Fields said he gave Payne a cut of $400 and paid another $1480 to Glenn A. Dies, who used to work for Fields and now works for Mrs. Etty. She said yesterday that he was trying to get Dies back from Honolulu to testify. He went there two weeks ago.

Paid to "John Doe"

Fields' record showed he paid another $1480 commission to "John Doe" and he swore yesterday he could not remember who that was or whether he paid the money by cash or check. He was sure, he said, that "John Doe" was not a Government employe.

Very few of the people in whose names Fields sent his orders to the WAA got the goods he ordered. He sold them to others. He identified copies of a dozen of his orders yesterday, for nails and concertina wire.

Concertinas are barbed wire traps set up in warfare. Fields told the committee that he found the concertina wire wheen the WAA could not locate it because it has been listed under musical supplies. He said also that he once found a supply of nails in the WAA stock, when housing agencies could not find them and believed there were none.

But never, never—Fields said—did he have any inside information. He got the goods, he said, by being progressive and aggressive.

Chairman Slaughter (D., Mo.), who was purged last week by President Truman and the Pendergast machine in Kansas City, presided at the hearing yesterday. Both he and Representatives Robertson (R., N. Dak.) questioned Felds and other witnesses.

Chinese Students To Visit Academy

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 12 (AP).—For better understanding of naval academy laboratory techniques, 19 Chinese naval officers will see first hand demonstrations when they vist here Friday.

These officers, visiting under the sponsorship of the International Training Administration, Inc., have completed a three-year course in naval architecture and marine engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where they received masters degrees.

On their trip they will be accompanied by Hilton C. Smith, special representative, and W. E. Sofford, marine consultant of the administration.

Tuck Appeals For Scrap Drive

Richmond, Va., Aug. 12 (AP).—Governor Tuck today appealed to the mayors of Virginia cities and county boards of supervisors to bac kthe new scrap an salvage drive.

Earlier, the Governor sent a request to all State Department heads asking them to make in immediate survey of their physical properties to determine if any scrap might be channeled into industrial uses.

The Governor suggested today that county and city authorities might also look about and find substantial quantities of unused metal.

Nazi Germ War Planned, Red Official Says

Nuernberg, Germany, Aug. 12 (U.P.).—Soviet prosecutor Victor Alexandrov today told the War Crimes Tribunal that the German high command had been preparing to launch a terrible "germ war" against the Allies.

Alexandrov backed his charge with an affidavit from Maj. Gen. Walter Schreiber, former German army medical corps scientist, who is now a Red army prisoner.

Upon a plea from the high command defense counsel, however, the court ordered Alexandrov to withdraw his charge until Schreiber could be brought to Nuernberg to testify.

Later Field Marshal Gen. Carl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt, commander of German forces in the west when the Allies lande din Normandy, took the stand to declare that he first had tried to persuade Hitler not to start the war and then pleaded with him to end it.

Rundstedt looked tried and depressed, as he testified that he opposed the Ardennes offensive "as doomed from the beginning" although it was "a taroke of genius as an operational idea."

He emphatically denied that Hitler ordered prisoners shot. He said he had been informed the order was given by a military officer, but "that was unlikely, as we were trained in a soliderly manner."

Fritz Sauter, attorney for Walter Funk, asked the tribunal to strike from the record testimony of Oswald Pohl, general of the SS economic and administration office, in which Pohl stated he told Funk that gold teeth and jewelry of murdered Jews were put in the Reichsbank.

he was very much in sympathy with the plan for a "set-aside" list of surplus property for war veterans.

"I, too, came home from four years overseas anticipating being able to buy a jeep," he said. "I have not been able to get one. So I, too, have a gripe against WAA."

He said that he had analyzed complaints from the field, and had learned that 90 per cent of them were from veterans. He found that, roughly, 65 per cent of these appeared to be justified. The remaining 35 per cent, he said, seemed to be based on erroneous information.

"Adverse publicity must in every case be examined," Littlejohn said. "The problem raised by the press should be brought out into the open and attacked, not defensively, but offensively.

"Good public relations and full and honest information are the responsibilities of our entire organization. It will be my policy to hide nothing. Every successful individual or business does make mistakes, admits them, profits by them, does not repeat them."

He told the regional directors that all letters should be answered in three days.

"If you cannot give a specific answer to the question raised," he said, "acknowledge the letter, set the date on which it will be answered, and see that the answer goes out on time."

General Littlejohn's "hair-down" talks with the regional directors will continue today and tomorrow.

Cumberlan dMay Regulate Smoke From Locomotives

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 12 (AP).—An ordinance requiring that bituminous coal-fired locomotives operated within the city of Cumberland limits be equipped with over fire jets as a means of controling smoke and gas was placed before the mayor and council for consideration today.

Charles Z. Heskett, city attorney, said the proposed ordinance would require the railroads to install the jets by April 1. It is provided that both the railroad and firemen of the locomotives would be subject to a fine of $100 for violations after the jets are installed. A fine of $1000 was suggested for failure to equip locomotives by the deadline.

In a letter to the council Heskett said he had the subject under study for more than two years.

"A complete regulation of smoke control, based upon the experience of all the cities which have effectively brought about smoke control, would require the creation of a special bureau manned by technically trained men, and, at the present time our city's resources do not seem to permit this," Haskett wrote.

He claimed that 80 per cent of the city's smoke is caused by locomotives.

Wife Describes Tryst to Save Her Husband

Chicago, Aug. 12 (U.P.).—Mrs. Doris Murray, 36, attempted to save her husband from a death sentence today by telling a jury about her eight-hour love tryst with his "best friend."

Clasping a rosary, her lips moving in prayer during lulls in the questioning, she admitted she was nude when her husband walked into the room and shot and killed Maj. John Fletcher, 38, of the Canadian army.

But she supported her husband's claim that he shot in self defense. She said he fired only when Fletcher attacked him with a chair.

She discussed poetry and music with Fletcher over cocktails at a swank bar. He asked her to accompany him to his room in the Morrison Hotel.

"I said, yest," she testified, her voice scarcely audible.

She said they were in the room from 2:30 p. m. until her husband arriver at 10:30 p. m. No food was sent to the room during that time, she said.

Her husband, Donald, 41, a salesman and deputy sheriff, killed Fletcher the night of May 27 trailing his wife to the hotel.

She testified as a witness for the court over the protests of both prosecution and defense. Her husband had rejected her offer to help his defense.

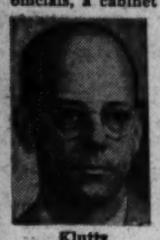
Fears Are Groundless On Secretarial Tests



Kluttz

PROTEST: Within an hour, a couple of days ago, I called the offices of four top-drawer Federal officials, a cabinet officer, a White House aide, and two agency heads. The moment I identified myself, the cordial feminine voice at the other end became a bit sharp and words were flung at me like this:

"You're just the man I want to talk with. I took and failed the stenographic test . . . That exam was unfair and unrealistic . . . I was given dictation by a person with a Brooklyn accent . . . Now I must take a general secretarial exam to keep my job and I might as well quit right now and if it'll be anything like the stenographic test."

And then came the payoff . . . "You," each of them said, "must do something about it." . . . Me?

Well, I must admit that this first major effort of Civil Service to bring war service typists and stenographers into the permanent service isn't what you'd call a howling success.

These four girls — and many more like them—are good, the best of the stenographic crop in their agencies. They must be to hold their jobs. Yet they failed what was heralded to be a simple test and now they're threatening to quit in disgust.

Despite the economic wave and major lay-offs, the Government is still out beating the bushes for stenographers and typists to come to Washington. The competitive exam the girls are fussing about didn't produce enough eligibles to fill 40 per cent of the war service typist and stenographic jobs in the Federal service. Only about 15,000 are eligible and there are more than twice that many jobs to be filled on a permanent basis.

A competitive exam is designed to stabilize employment in the field it is given for. As a matter of cold fact, this test, however, aggravated the shortage of typists and stenographers in Government offices. Many a girl who flunked that exam —and 51 per cent of them did—simply packed up her bags and either went back home or else took what she hopes will be a red-tapeless job in private industry.

But equally irritated is the secretary who passed the test. Now, she learns, the exam won't count and that she must pass a new test—a general secretarial exam—before she can get permanent status in a secretarial job that is classified grade 5, 6 or 7. One topnotch secretary told me:

"To take another test is like being judged for the same offense three times which is against the law. I took a test for a war service job, and I took the April test. I passed them both. Now I must take a third one. Aren't we secretaries being made to pay for the mistakes of some Civil Service jerk?"

I did all I could do—I took up these gripes with the top Civil Service examining staff and the information I received should be reassuring to those girls who must take the secretarial test. I was assured:

1. That the secretarial test will not require candidates to take dictation at a rate of 96 words a minute to get a passing mark.

2. That experience on the job, most likely, will weigh heavily in rating candidates.

"We realize," I was told, "that a top secretary oftentimes ceases to be a stenographer as such. She's more of an administrative assistant, drafting letters and memos of her own for her bosses' signature, and not too infrequently she dictates to a stenographer.

"It would be very foolish to require that a girl take dictation at 96 words a minute to keep her job. We'll have to work out some yardstick to give her credit for experience."

This information, I believe, should be welcome news to the thousands of war service girls who will take the general secretarial exam to be given in early winter. I have a hunch that a far greater percentage than 49 will pass it. As a practical matter, the commission is in a spot where it dares not make the test too tough or tricky.

And for the grade 2, 3 and 4 typists and stenographers who failed the outlook for Government work is good, too. First, those who are reasonably godo in their jobs won't get fired as had been planned because there is no one better to take their jobs. And second, another test will be given in the late fall and it should go off a lot smoother than the one in April.

Incidentally, many of the girls who flunked the stenographer-typist test say they intend to take the general clerical exam. They argue this would be a simpler method t oget permanent status, and clerks, they say, go further than typists and stenos.

But consider this: Civil Service has no plans to hold a general clerical exam at any foreseeable date, and when the clerks are examined it will likely be in a dozen or so special fields. And this: The clerks will be the major group to be hit hardest in any reduction of force.

Crab Fishing In Maryland Best in Years

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 12 (AP).—Maryland fishermen are enjoying one of the best crab seasons in years, and despite the fact that the catch is diminishing in some areas, the quality of crabs has been exceptionally good.

From crab packers in various parts of the State came comment that prices apparently fluctuated the season along with the meat supply.

Still, the demand remains high, and it appears that many fishermen will continue crabbing even after the start of the oyster season, September 1, because of the abundant supply.

A West River packer said today he had handled more crabs this year than in five or six, and declared, "crabs we caught last week were the bes I've ever seen."

Demand Continues Good

In this region a "very limited amount of soft shell crabs" was expected within the next two weeks, but the catch of hard shells is still good and the demand heavy.

At Crisfield, fisherman are still taking jumbo soft shell crabs and although the catch of hard shells has slackened somewhat, it appears to be picking up.

A packer there said the crabs were "the best in 10 years." He estimated, however, that about September 15 about half of the crabbing would take to gathering oysters.

One wark, spot, apparently local, in the crab situation was a report from Hoopers Island that around Pine oPint a heavy death rate was noted.

A prominent packer said, "It is a peculiar situation. Crabs have been coming in shore any drying in large numbers. Some crab pots have been found with all crabs dead. We don't know the cause of it, but it seems to be noticeable especially in this area including Hooper Straits and part of the Potomac River."

Many Small Crabs Taken

Near Tilghman's as well as in the Hooper's Island area, a large number of small crabs have been taken during the past few weeks.

In the former region, there has been a considerable drop in crab catch during the past 10 days, but one packer said, "earlier in the season there were more crabs than we could handle and the quality was exceptionally good."

The Tidewater Fisheries Commission, in charge of crab conservation, had predicted that this would be a bumper year for Maryland crabbers.

A commission spokesman said today that although no figures were available on the crab catch, reports indicated it was great throughout the State and the quality high.

The commission has not yet decided whether November shall be eliminated as a crabbing month. It may eliminate the month under State law for conservation.

'Mama's Boy' Strangles Her, Calls Police

Salem, Mass., Aug. 12 (U.P.).—Thomas Henry Brown, 29, six-foot-three-inch "mama's boy," and discharged combat soldier, called police to his home today and informed them that he had strangled his mother—"with my bare hands."

His story was vertified at once. The body of Mrs. Annie Dixon Brown, 67, prominent club woman, one-time candidate for the legislature, and above all a proud mother, was sprawled on a bed with the marks of her only child's fingers upon her throat.

"I did it for the welfare of the citizens of Salem," the son told police.

Brown made a statement without elaborating as to motive and then was arraigned on a charge of murder. After he pleaded not guilty, he was jailed without bond.

Used to be Quiet Boy

Brown had been a silent, self-effacing boy who went through high school almost unnoticed. In 1942 he entered the service. A year later he found himself in combat in Europe.

It was a far different Tom Brown who returned to Salem with an honorable discharge last October. No longer a docile, reticent "mama's boy," he stood 6 feet, 3 inches and weighed more than 200 pounds. Assertive and quick tempered, he quarreled frequently with his mother and openly resenter her well-meant efforts to guide him.

Slain by Daughter

York, Pa., Aug. 12 (U.P.).—Mrs. Sarah A. Aughey, 81, died today from ax wounds of the throat, head and body which members of her family said were inflicted by her 60-year-old daughter who then attempted to strangle her own daughter-in-law.

The aged woman's daughter, Mrs. Minnie M. Rudisill, was taken to the State Hospital for a mental examination.

Coroner Lester J. Sell said members of the family occused Mrs. Rudisill of attacking her mother, and then attempting to strangle Mrs. John Rudisill, 22, with a noosed rope when she answered the aged woman's calls for help.

U. S. Declines To Take Part In Md. Strike

Baltimore, Aug. 12 (AP).—The United States Conciliation Service today declined to intervene in a strike which has tied up the Cumberland Undergarment Co. at Cumberland, Md., since July 18, and a union official said it was likely the plant will remain closed.

A district conciliation service spokesman characterized it as "an inter-union" dispute and said the agency did not handle such cases.

The announcement came after Mrs. Margaret Chase, chairman of a strikers' negotiation committee, led a group in a brief meeting with conciliation officials here.

Mrs. Angela Bambace, manager of the Maryland-Virginia-West Virginia district of the International Ladies' Garment Worker Union, said the walkout by 24 of the company's 172 employes is not sanctioned by the ILGWU. She did not participate in the conference.

Offer by Workers

At Cumberland, Irwin Jaffe, a union official, said Mrs. Chase and 11 other strikers had been suspended from the ILGWU.

Mrs. Chase said the striking workers would return if granted a 15-cent-an-hour increase and adjustment of piece rates in accordance with recommendations made by an ILGWU rate engineer.

She reported one recommendation was that girls inspecting slips should receive 26 cents a dozen. The rate is now 10½ cents.

Mrs. Bambage said Lester Milberg, the operator, would not reopen "unless we can guarantee that we will not have any more trouble, and we are not going to try to convince him under present conditions."

Graduated Wage Scale

contract wtih the company calls for a starting age of 45 cents an hour, with an increase of 5 cents every six weeks up to a 60-cent rate.

After that, she said, the contract calls for setting of piece rates "which should yield workers 75 cents an hour or more."

"Our's is a piece rate industry," she declared. "Experienced sewers can make big wages, but beginners cannot expect to make the same money at the start.

"We have acontract with the employer, and we are not going to break it just because of four or five people."

Russian Press Attacks Allies In Conference

Moscow, Aug. 12 (AP).—The Soviet press charged today that "unseemly maneuvers" were endangering the prestige of the Paris Peace Conference, accused a "british-American bloc" of trying to control the conference, and criticized Britain, the United States and France for their stands on the problem of procedure.

A Paris dispatch of the official news agency Tass said maneuvers "behind a screen" already had worked obvious damage to the conference and affected its prospects. It said Britain and the United States "played a leading role in hampering the main proposal of the council of foreign ministers on questions of procedure."

"The attitude of France also deserves scrutiny," the dispatch added. "It first introduced a proposal on the order of voting which corresponde dto the spirit of the decision, and wound up in the camp of the enemies of this decision. Something apparently happened behind the walls of the conference, resulting in the French reversal."

The Tas swriter expressed the view that the peace conference should continue with its work even if it meant postponing the September 23 meeting of the United Nations General Assembly to the end of the year.

Pravda's international reviewer, Jacobs Viktorov, said a British-American bloc was attempting to control the conference, using Australian minister of external affairs, H. V. Evatt for this purpose.

Viktorov also commented acidly upon United States Secretary of State Byrnes' sharp exchange with Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov last week, Declaring that the Secretary should know that the "high and sharp tone" of his words did not add conviction, and should remember the saying, "Jupiter, you are angry. Therefore you are wrong."

Another Pravda commentator, N. Sergeeva, said the Netherlands typified the role he said was being played also by Australia, Belgium and Greece in helping the British and Americans to enforce their will upon the rest of the world, both in the peace conference and in the U. N. Security Council.

Winchester, Va., Aug. 12 (AP).—Senator Byrd has announced that his annual orchard picnic, suspended during the war years, will be resumed this year and is to be held in a grove on the "Rosemont Orchard" farm west of Berryville on Saturday, August 31.

During the morning, the visitors will be permitted to inspect Byrd orchards as well as the Senator's cooling and packing plant at Berryville.

After a country ham-fried chicken luncheon, there will be a program in which specialists from various experiment stations and State extension services will discuss the DDT spray, harmone sprays for preventing premature dropping of apples as they ripen, and the new Virginia apple advertising law which levies a special tax of 1¼ per bushel on all packed apples.

Hospital Space Seen Growing In Maryland

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 12 (AP).—Hospital facilities in western Maryland are likely to improve as a result of the recently enacted Hill-Burtoon survey and construction act, Benjamin W. Wright, superintendent of Memorial Hospital and a member of the hospital committee of the State Planning Commission, said today.

Wright explained Maryland is one of the few States which anticipated passage of the act and made preparations accordingly. Participation is on a State-wide basis and Wright said already much survey work has been completed in the State. The check is expected to take at least six more months.

Additional facilities for Cumberland's two hospitals—Memorial and Allegany, the building of small hospitals in rural areas, or a combination of both plans loom as possibilities for the area.

The hospitals here have over 400 beds or 10 per 1000 persons on a city basis. The proposed standard of five per 1000 people is just about met in the county, but hospitals here also serve nearby West Virginia and Pennsylvania, which lowers the standard. In the Nation as a whole there are 3.3 beds per 1000 and 40 per cent of the counties in the United States have no hospitals.

Cumberland To Welcome Legionnaires

Cumberland, Md., Aug 12 — This city is readying itself for an influx of thousands of American Legionnaires and their friends Wednesday, when the first postwar convention of the Legion's Maryland department gets underway.

Convention Chairman Vincent P. Ingram said there would be 1300 delegates accredited to the conclave, plus a large number of alternates, guests and representatives of the Legion Auxiliary.

He added that a total of 10,000 visitors were expected Friday, when the convention is to be climaxed by a parade of veterans of World Wars I and II.

Post from Pennsylvania and West Virginia also will be in the line of March.

Governor O'Conor, Mayor Theodore McKeldin of Baltimore, Republican candidate for Governor; William Preston Lane, jr., the Democratic gubernatorial candidate; Representative Beall (D-Md.), and Representative Jennings Randolph (D-WVA) have accepted invitations to review the parade.

Every available accommodation is being pressed into service to house the visitors and rooms have been reserved in Frostburg, Grantsville, Bedford, Pa., and several West Virginia communities.

Candidates for State commander are C. Floyd Feete, Brunswick funeral director; Joseph L. Ferri and John Boshen both of Baltimore.

Ferrie is an official of the Baltimore local of the International Longshoremen (AFL) and the first labor leader to seek the post. Boshen is a past State commander of the Twenty-ninth Division Association.

All three candidates are World War I veterans.

Shoe Plant Curtailment Boosts Jobless Pay

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 12 (AP).—Director D. Lee Staley of the State unemployment compensation board's local office said curtailed production in Washington County shoe and tanning plants is responsible for an increase of 200 applicants for unemployment pay last week.

Staley said the plants are handicapped by shortage of leather and have furloughed workers, some indefinitely but most of them for short periods in order to spread employment.

The Hagerstown office now has 1179 unemployment compensation claimants.

County Patrolman E. F. Heagner said that young Duggins fell overboard about 11:20 a. m. and was in the water about 40 minutes.

His body was recovered by the Earleigh Heights Fire Department. Artificial respiration was administered to him en route to the Naval Academy, where he was placed under a resuscitator for an hour and a half. He failed to revive.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Duggins, sr., of Pines-on-Severn were with their son at the time of the accident.

Augusta Airport Plane Crash Kills 2, Injures 3

Waynesboro, W. Va., Aug. 12 (AP). Two World War II veterans were killed in a headon crash on the Augusta Airport runway before a Sunday airshow crowd of nearly 4000 persons. Three persons suffered minor injuries.

The accident occurred shortly after the two planes, a Piper Cub and a former Army AT6, had landed from opposite directions on the runway.

The dead were DeWitt Chandler, 21, of Stuart's Draft, recently discharged fro mthe Army, pilot of the cub, and his passenger, Walter Jackson Ellison, 20, of Waynesboro, former Navy photographer who had gone up with Chandler to take pictures of the air show.

Stanley Kline, of Harrisonburg, pilot of the privately-owned AT6, suffered minor injuries, as did his two passengers, Misses Martha Raye and Ellen Shiflett, both of Waynesboro. The three were treated at the hospital and dismissed.

Cadet-Middy Group Sees Island Assault

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 12 (AP).—Bloodsworth Island in Chesapeake Bay took a heavy pounding today from bombs, shells and rockets as a naval task staged an amphibious assault for the edification of 800 midshipmen and cadets from the Nation's two service schools.

From the decks of transports, the future admirals and generals watched destroyers rain shells on "Blue Beach" to soften up the objective for a simulated landing by six waves of invading Marines. Then 60 planes—Avengers, Helldivers, and Hellcats—bombed and strafed the enemy beach, sending up huge clouds of smoke.

The assault on the island 90 miles up Chesapeake Bay from Norfolk opened 10 days of operation Camid —amphibious warfare exercises in which the cadets and midshipmen wil be joint participants and observers for the first time in history of the U. S. Military Academy and the U. S. Naval Academy.

The student officers, 350 from West Point and 450 from Annapolis, started back to Norfolk this afternoon for the remainder of the exercises to be held at Little Creek and Virginia Beach.

The exercise, which began at 6:30 a. m. and continued until 11 a. m., was observed by Vice Admiral Daniel E. Barbey, commander of Atlantic Fleet amphibious forces from his flagship, the Catoctin.

A golf tournament, sightseeing tour, trapshooting contest, bowling and a dance are on the social side of the day's program.

Election and installation of officers will take place tomorrow.

The convention will come to a close Wednesday night with a parade and dance.

President Won't Seize Tractor Plant

By the Associated Press

Rejecting a recommendation of Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach, President Truman has decided not to seize the strike-bound J. I. Case Co. farm machinery plant at Racine, Wis.

The decision was announced yesterday by Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross, who said the President felt seizures should be ordered only where the public welfare "is vitally involved."

It was assumed that the decision against seizure would apply also to the much larger Allis-Chalmers Co. with headquarters at West Allis, Wis., whose eight plants likewise have been shut down by strikes of the CIO-Auto Workers and CIO-United Electrical Workers for months.

President Truman took two risks in deciding against seizure at Cas, apparently in the hope of bringing about resumption of negotiations.

Risks Described

These risks were that:

(a) Schwellenbach, disappointed that his advice was not followed, might resign; (b) the definite knowledge that the White House would not intervene might touch off a wave of sympathy shutdowns by the CIO Auto Workers in other farm equipment plants such as International Harvester and Oliver Plow.

Schwellenbach r e co m m ended early in June that the Government take over the Case and Allis-Chalmers farm equipment plants in the interest of vitally needed food production. This was based on the inability of the United States Conciliation Servcie to get negotiations rolling at that time.

The Allis-Chalmers Co. strenuously objected to reports emanating from here that the Government was contemplating seizure. It said the union would not bargain while that possibilty existed. The Auto Workers countered that the company declined to bargain at all.

Negotiations still were being carried on between Allis-Chalmers and the unions at Boston, LaPorte, Ind., Cincinnati and elsewhere but broke off at the main plants in West Allis more than a week ago, the Conciliation Service said.

The White House said the task of concilating the disputes still rested with the Labor Department.

United States Conciliation Director Edgar L. Warren said there have been no negotiations since April 28 at Case, whose president, L. R. Clausen, twice has flatly turned down invitations of Schwellenbach and Secretary of Agriculture Anderson to meet with them here.

Anderson's aides said he had not made any written or formal recommendation to Mr. Truman either for or against seizure, although the Secretary of Agriculture was represented by labor officials os originally opposing Government operation. His department would be the logical agency to take over.

The strike at Case began last December 26, although the dispute arose last October. The Allis-Chalmers plants went down in March and April.

In both cases the unions were demanding wage increases of 18½ cents an hour, seniority rights to employment, adjustment of present piece rates, establishment of new grievance procedure and a contract provision for maintenance of union membership.

Silver Spring Woman Shot; Husband Declared a Suicide

Mrs. Marian Tyler, 44, of 607 Sligo ave., Silver Spring, Md., was in critical condition last night from a bullet wound allegedly inflicted by her husband who later killed himself with a pistol shot.

Montgomery County police said Robert L. Tyler, 48, wounded his wife in the chest with a .32 caliber pistol and then shot himself Sunday night in their home. He died at Washington Sanitarium at midnight.

Policeman Frank Griggs, who answered the radio call to the home, said he found Tyler sitting in a chair with a bullet hole in his head and the pistol at his feet. Mrs. Tyler was upstairs staggering about with a bullet wound in her chest.

Mrs. Tyler, a clerk in the Patent Office, was operated on yesterday at the sanitarium. Authorities there said Tyler had been released from the institution Sunday after a short illness.

Dr. Frank J. Borschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, issued a certificate of suicide in the death of the husband. The couple has no children.

Hunting Lodge Sold

Cebolla, Colo.—Sportsman's Lodge, hunting and fishing resort near here, where President Theodore Roosevelt used to stay while on Rocky Mountain hunting trips, has been sold to two Denver men for an undisclosed price. The buyers were Stuart V. Wandell and Lieut. Col. J. E. Hart.

Not a Chance

Seaside.—The usually elusive clams didn't have a chance. Recent low tides here brought an influx of clam diggers—one with a "plumber's helper." The operator applied the bathroom plunger to the sand [illegible]'s hiding place, worked it for a few m[illegible] down and picked up his clam.

India Accepts Interim Rule, Wavell Says

New Delhi, Aug. 12 (AP).—Viceroy Lord Wavell announced tonight that the All-India Congress Party had accepted an invitation to form a government to rule India until a constitution is framed.

A brief communique from the viceroy said he had invited the Congress Party "to make proposals for immediate formation of an interim government and the president of the congress has accepted the invitation."

The major question of whether the Moslem League would cooperate in the new move remained unanswered, but it was considered extremely doubtful that its viceroy had made his latest move without notifying or consulting M. A. Jinnah, president of the Moslem League, chief rival of the Congress. The Moslem League has reverted to the cry of Pakistan—a separate Moslem nation—and has threatened direct action that would make it impossible for any Congress government to function.

Viceroy Lord Wavell said Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, head of the Congress Party, would visit New Delhi shortly to discuss his proposals.

Meanwhile, these developments, designed to strengthen the Congress' hand in formation of a government, occurred:

The Congress issued a conciliatory resolution patiently fashioned to meet the major objections of the Moslem League, which withdrew acceptance of the British cabinet mission's plan for India's independence two weeks ago in Bombay.

The Sikh minority, which announced it would boycott the constituent assembly, met with the Congress working committee which later issued an appeal—regarded as a face-saving formality for the Sikhs—to the minority to withdraw the boycott. Its leaders already had said it was prepared to do so.

Nehru, in an exclusive interview, emphasized that the Congress policy offered the "largest possible autonomy" for the princely states and compared the status of the larger states in the projected federation as equal to that of a province.

Go Slow On Food

In view of the still serious world food situation, it is disturbing to find Agriculture Department officials talking so soon about lifting restrictions on the use of grain. The basis of the current talk is last week's bumper crop estimates. At this time of year, in the face of pleasant crop reports, it is easy to become too optimistic. That's just what we did a year ago, when we dropped food rationing after VJ-Day and then lived to regret it. The current talk about lifting restrictions on the use of grain sounds as if we are about to repeat the same tragic mistake all over again.

International food authorities agree that in some ways the world grain situation looks better this year than last, but they are unanimous in pointing out that we are not yet over the hump in meeting the post-war emergency. In order to get through the past year, the world used up all of its spare carry-over of wheat, and we are starting the new year from scratch. It will take bumper crops, plus continued restrictions, to get us through the coming winter, they now believe. The United States wheat crop is estimated in the latest crop report at the record breaking figure of 1,160,366,000 bushels. But this is only 37 million bushels more than we produced last year. On the other hand, our carry-over this time is down to the lowest level in 20 years—except for one year—so that our total supply, even with the bumper crop, is nearly 200 million bushels less than a year ago.

Canada and the United States last year between them used up about 300 million bushels of their carry-over to meet the world emergency. To make up that gap, we so far can count on only 37 million additional bushels from United States production. Canadian crop estimates are not yet available, but even if Canada's wheat crop should be 100 million bushels better than last year, the total supply for the two countries still would be far less than a year ago. Demand from the hungry peoples in the war ravaged areas may be somewhat less this year, because of the comparatively good crops reported in Western Europe. But the experts still find a considerable gap between probable supply and probable demand. Some estimates of the gap run to 300 million bushels.

So far the United States has earmarked only 250 million bushels of wheat for export during the coming year, as compared with 386 million bushels sent to the needy countries last year. Even this 250 million bushels will be hard to get from our current supplies, without last year's big carry-over, unless we continue restrictions on the use of wheat in this country. And there is no assurance that 250 million bushels will be enough. We cannot ask the hungry people of Europe and Asia to continue to live on diets of 900 calories a day indefinitely. That was a tragic performance last winter. It would be inviting disaster to try it another year.

In view of the outlook, there is little reason for talking about lifting restrictions on the use of wheat in this country unless we close our eyes to world need, let UNRRA fold up, and forget our obligations to other nations. If that is what is proposed, under current plans for terminating UNRRA, no one has dared to admit it. We are still talking as though we intend to see that food is in supply for the hungry, either through international action or national action. Let us remain consistent.

Price Future

A Nation-wide Gallup poll indicates that 9 out of 10 people believe that prices will go up during the next six months. This is an attitude of mind calculated to bring about price increases that might be avoided if the consuming public held to a contrary opinion. For past experience has proved that increases in prices produced by an inflationary expansion of credit and currency are aggravated and the inflationary period is unnecessarily prolonged if the public assumes that the upward movement is going to continue.

The result of such beliefs is to stimulate speculative buying in the hope of "cashing in" later on expected price increases, and to induce the average individual to anticipate his future needs by buying more than he can currently consume. Thus fuel is added to inflationary fires, making inevitable later price recessions more extreme and demoralizing than they would otherwise be.

Contrariwise, in periods of declining prices, the tendency of people to assume that prices will continue to fall causes buying to be deferred, with the result that the downward pressure on prices is accentuated and the later inevitable upward turn of price indicators is delayed.

These psychological factors have an important and demoralizing influence on the trend of prices that is apt to be underrated. If there were a better understanding of market mechanisms, price movements would be less violent, and in the long run the public would get more for its money than can be obtained by either overbuying or underbuying, as the case may be, to forestall anticipated price changes.

Atomic Appointments

It is not Post policy to urge appointments on the Chief Executive, and this newspaper would not do so now if the administration of the McMahon law were not of such vast importance. Because it is, and because there is so much uncertainty over the appointments to the new atomic commission, the name of David Lilienthal, TVA chairman, is put forward as that of the one man suitable for the chairmanship. His qualifications are well known. He is a completely non-political personality, without party liens or lines. He has a rare familiarity with the hydra-headed atomic problem—as dealing with the "absolute" weapon, as concerned with the most fabulous public utility of all time, as the misguided herald of a strange new age. As chairman of the State Department board of consultants, Mr. Lilienthal pioneered the trail that all men of goodwill hope will lead to a world atomic authority.

But, these considerations aside, the choice of Mr. Lilienthal would have the logic of pure political science, and for this basic reason: the McMahon law is incomplete. It remains a half-way law. It nationalizes atomic energy, yet by techniques that are not up to date. It puts the issue in a gaslight era setting. It sets up an unwieldy five-man board, ignores the necessity of a decentralized, out-of-Washington administration, invites buck-passing of great discretionary powers, neglects the adaptability of the corporate system, and is weighted with civil service.

The one hope of making it work is through an administration wholly "above the battle," free from distorting pressures, devoted to a socially scientific approach in public affairs. David Lilienthal is the only man in the country with experience and an unflawed record in the administrative business of taking an essentially socialistic concept and making it work democratically. That, essentially, is the need for him as chairman of the commission. He knows how to work with and through institutions on a local, State and national level without misusing extensive power. He also has the political know-how to battle for changes in the law, if necessary, to tailor the law to the times.

It was not in the spirit of experiment, but under the fearsome rod of necessity that Congress passed a law nationalizing control of atomic energy under a civilian commission. The concept is brave. It is mold-smashing. President Truman, by the same token, must reject the usual channels and think with boldness, non-politically, in selecting the men who will steer our destiny in these first few years of the Atom Age.

Alabama Tension

Possibly through emphatic action on the part of officials as well as a portion of the local citizenry who refused to condone mob violence, a serious race riot was forestalled in Athens, Ala., Saturday. What did occur was despicable enough. Lawless gangs of up to 2000 white men succeeded in running most Negroes off the streets, and from 15 to 100 persons were injured, depending on whose estimates are accepted. The bright spot in an otherwise ugly picture is that the mobs were dispersed with no deaths ensuing.

A significant difference between this and other recent outbursts in the South, however, is to be seen in the prompt arrest of nine ringleaders, eight of whom are said to be teen-agers. They are scheduled to be arraigned before a county judge. Meanwhile, to prevent further disturbances, more police will be on duty and, in the words of the judge, will be prepared "to turn the fire hose on any mob—nobody with wet clothes wants to lynch anybody."

As seems to be usual in racial outbreaks, the origin of this particular incident is obscure. It seems to have started in a simple fist fight between two white veterans and a Negro. This was soon distorted and fanned by rabble-rousers into a near pogrom. It is apparent that the explosive attitudes which permitted this situation to develop existed beforehand and needed only a spark to ignite them. Doubtless the relatively more emancipated status of Negroes as a result of the war has given rise generally to local tensions. These in turn have been aggravated by welled-up resentment over the manner in which more and more Negroes have been exercising their political rights set down by law some 80 years ago.

Britain's Trade

The pessimists who have argued that Britain could not possibly export enough during the next few years to get by with the aid of the credits placed at her disposal by this country and Canada are beginning to feel a bit more hopeful. For exports have recently been expanding at a rate to upset earlier, more conservative, calculations. May exports rose to 115 per cent of prewar shipments, and it is reported that the totals for later months will be even better. As a result of this rapid rise in exports, together with the severe restrictions placed on imports, the adverse foreign trade balance this year may not exceed 1.3 billion dollars, instead of reaching the three-billion-dollar total that was anticipated when the loan negotiations with the United States started.

In addition to financing an adverse trade balance, the British have to make other payments abroad to cover military costs, relief and certain capital expenditures. However, the shrinkage of the trade deficit will so relieve the drain on dollar credits that the London Economist concludes that "it should not be an impossible task for the controlling authorities to keep the aggregate deficit over the next three years within the total of the American and Canadian 'credits' (amounting to five billion dollars).

At present, selling is easy because of acute shortages of goods in face of clamorous demands. The task ahead, however, will not be easy, for it will entail continued sacrifices on the part of the British people to build up export industries by shifting labor and capital from domestic industries that minister to consumer needs. It does not follow that Britain should spend all her credits to pay for imports of machinery and industrial raw materials, because food is as essential to attainment of a high level of production as cotton or machine tools. Britain's trade policies have to be judged in relation to her ultimate objective of strengthening her industrial structure and enabling this structure to support the burdens that are a legacy of the war.

Britain's task will be sensibly lightened if we succeed in keeping our economy on an even keel and show a willingness to buy as well as sell abroad. Many Englishmen fear that this country may try to expand its export trade and restrict imports unduly, thereby creating a shortage of dollar exchange and making it impossible for Britain to follow the liberal trade policies to which she is now pledged. Just prior to his death, Lord Keynes wrote an article, published posthumously in the Economic Journal, in which he maintains that our foreign loan commitments are so large and our capacity to import so great that such fears are groundless. So far as the immediate future is concerned, the weight of evidence appears to favor the Keynes thesis. But we need to be reminded constantly of the fact that creditor as well as debtor states assume responsibilities when they enter into loan agreements with one another.

Phone Recording

We do not share the dire apprehensions with which some groups view the Federal Communications Commission's proposed report legalizing use of telephone recorders. The FCC, it seems to us, has done a commendable job of evaluating the merits of this new gadget, and has developed a workable procedure to protect the interests of everyone concerned. To be sure, recorded telephone conversations recently have proved embarrassing to one highly placed official, Representative Andrew J. May. But merely because a politician has been caught in the mesh of his own indiscretion is no reason to lean over backwards and outlaw what can be a generally useful invention.

The primary application of such instruments undoubtedly would be in business cases where a permanent record of transactions is desired. It is common practice now for secretaries to listen in and take down important conversations in shorthand. Phone recorders would be an important labor saver and at the same time would provide an accurate and incontrovertible transcription for future reference. Some 20,000 of these recorders are already in use despite the lack of general authorization to date. They were employed to good advantage by the Army and Navy during the war.

To compare telephone recording to wire tapping seems to us a false analogy. Wire tapping consists of a third person cutting in on a conversation unknown to either of the other two partites. Though this procedure is sometimes employed in criminal investigations, the courts have held, with good reason, that information so obtained without the knowledge of the speakers is privileged and cannot be used as evidence. But wire tapping is not the question here. The FCC very properly has insisted that recording machines be equipped with an automatic device which sounds a signal to the other party when a conversation is being transcribed. It also suggests that an asterisk be placed in the telephone directory to denote each subscriber who possesses a recording instrument. These are sensible safeguards against abuse. They should be adequate warning to anyone not to disclose over the telephone confidential or incriminating material which he is unwilling to have preserved.

Protection of the privacy of telephone conversations, we agree, is a desirable thing. However, there are few instances of absolute privacy now. Many calls are handled by switchboard operators, and there are numerous telephone extensions in use—not to mention that good old institution, the party line. We cannot see how, with the ample modifications the FCC prescribes, telephone recorders can infringe on anyone's privacy. Conceivably recorders may cause some persons to be more chary in their language. And possibly the knowledge that such instruments exist may to some extent inhibit love trysts or the long drawn out revelation of soul-searching secrets over the telephone. But is that bad?

Erratum

By an unfortunate error, Herblock's cartoon of Monday entitled "Outside the Big Tent" included Cuba as one of the applicants for membership in the United Nations. We regret the mistake. Cuba, of course, was one of the charter members of the United Nations.

Drivers' Tests

When first taking a driver's test the normal person naturally does not know how to drive, because he lacks the necessary experience. In making allowances for this many people are permitted to pass these tests who are quite incapable of driving safely—either at that time or later. My suggestion would be not to change the kind of test given now, but to issue only a permit limited to three or six months. During this time the applicant could gain experience, can become a good driver. At the end of this period—before issuing a permanent permit—the applicant ought to be put through a really tough and thorough test.

Another provision in connection with this suggestion would subject out-of-State drivers staying longer than a certain period in D. C. or being employed here to the same secondary test if their permit is older than the period set for a temporary permit.

I am confident that such a procedure as outlined would reduce the great number of incapable drivers now holding permits.

Polio In Arlington

Dr. C. C. Dauer, District Health Department epidemologist, "was inclined to minimize" the vivid and convincing story of August 7 by Gerald G. Gross on the geographical spacing of polio cases in relation to a bad sewer in Arlington County.

The attitude of Dr. Dauer is in line with that I met with in Arlington when I went through a similar fight a year ago. Why a District official should pull his punches with regard to a condition in Arlington is a mystery.

There must be something fundamentally wrong with the teaching of public health officials, those who come in through medical training as well as those who enter as sanitary engineers. Your family physician will always stand against nuisances, recommending that you "move away." It is the specialists, who should lead the fight, who resent the intensive type of coverage of such situations revealed in Mr. Gross' story.

The Virginia State Health Department and the then Governor Darden were sympathetic in our fight last summer. I think the county health officials should be directly under the Governor and the State administration. The county board is helpless because it must rely on the technicians, who are so expert at "minimizing."

"Mr. Byrnes' Outburst"

Your editorial of August 7 from Paris states that "Mr. Byrnes has never allowed his personal feelings to stand in the way of the effort to build the foundations of a durable peace." A remarkable judgment for you to make in this day of Dewey and other students who have shown it is impossible to divorce our personal experience and bias from our behavior.

Byrnes is a Southern "gentleman," who fought the whole idea of popular government when he was in the Senate. Can you expect him to forget his personal views when dealing with the Russians?

Is Evatt of Australia an American stooge when he votes with our delegation? Why, then, is the Czechoslovakian delegation a stooge for the Russians because it happens to vote with Russia?

Your editorial, an obvious bit of melodrama, ends up with a clear warning to Russia, and to the American people, that peace is impossible, that we want to gang up the world against Russia and her "stooges." It is provocation of the most dangerous sort.

In Defense of Georgia

Your paper has been giving a lot of notoriety to the lynching case here, which is understandable. Don't you think you're a little out of proportion? Every year here in Georgia Negroes kill white people in much the same manner, but I haven't heard of your paper or any Northern paper decrying the fact in headlines.

I think it is terrible that this crime should have been committed, and I sincerely hope that all the participants will be fully punished for their hateful, uncalled-for deed. Because this crime occurred in Georgia does not mean that all the citizens condone such an awful act. They do not.

My mother-in-law wrote this week that our nice State was being given a black eye by your newspapers. Georgia is a nice State in many ways, and its people are sick and tired of having their adversities constantly emphasized by critics. It is pitiable that all of us must suffer for this dastardly deed of a few

Wheeler Bill

On the Wheeler-Reed bill, your editorial of August 12 requests a veto. But it contains no rational basis for such a conclusion. The bill was not "a hastily worked out compromise." It is the result of three years of study.

The bill does not ask for a "guarantee," but only a review of plans in the light of changed conditions. Since the bankruptcies began, interest rates have been cut in half, and the production value of railroads has increased by half.

The bill was recommended practically unanimously by the committees of the House and Senate and passed by a large majority of 176 to 71.

If the President vetoes the bill, several hundred thousand small stockholders will be expropriated. But if he signs it, they might partly recover losses and bondholders should ultimately recover their principal and interest. If the bill becomes law any potential injustice to creditors can be corrected by the ICC, by the courts and by legislation at the next session. But if the bill is vetoed, the current grave injustice to debtors will be beyond remedy, as several bankruptcies will soon terminate.

If the bill becomes law, several hundred thousand citizens will benefit and no insurance companies will be hurt. If the bill is vetoed, multitudes will suffer in order that insurance companies may own the railroads. Is this sound national policy? ELISHA FRIEDMAN.

'Argentine Research'

In The Post of July 25 there appeared a letter under the heading "Argentine Research" by W. J. Morris of Patuxent River, in which the writer called attention to the "awesome" fact that the "Fascist government of Argentina boldly announces her intention of supporting physicists in its atomic research" and requests the delegates of the U. N. to control Argentina's research and production.

As an Argentine, with somewhat varied and versatile past activities, including the study of medicine, history and law and having acted at times as reporter, I feel compelled once again to try to counteract this vicious type of propaganda.

In a few paragraphs, I shall try to calm those quaking souls who have been brooding over the Hiroshima experiment and who are suffering from what I might term as a pituitary atomic malaise.

The news about atomic research in Argentina was given to the public by a sensationalist rather a sober American reporter. Most of his "news" is the result of his fertile imagination rather than being based on facts.

If you can but forget all the nonsense that has lately been broadcast about Argentina, it might surprise you to learn the true facts—that the Argentine Republic was the first and thus far is the only nation that has always stressed, preached and practiced the principle of "general arbitration without restriction or compromises" whenever a dispute arises between nations. Argentina signed her first arbitration treaty with Chile in 1856; declared in 1874 that, with or without treaties, the Argentine government was resolved to settle all her international questions by arbitration. This was not merely an idle statement because later Argentina, victorious in the war with Paraguay, instead of following the customary course of victorious powers in such cases, solemnly declared that victory does not confer on the victor the right to impose its will, but submitted the settlement of frontiers to arbitration.

In 1880, Argentina persuaded the government of Colombia to adhere to the principle that arbitration was the proper procedure for the settlement of international questions. In 1912 another treaty of arbitration was signed with Colombia. In the life of the Republic, similar treaties were signed with many countries. At the Second Peace Conference, Argentina was acclaimed for her endeavors in this field and in 1912 at the Maryland Peace Society, Argentina was declared the pioneer and supporter of the principle of arbitration.

Perhaps, even now Mr. Murray will still feel a bit skeptical about my country; perhaps he figures that we back up to jump better. History should eradicate this form of mind.

It has been repeatedly asserted that Fascist Argentina wishes to swallow the small countries that surround her, that she is making preparations in order to be ready at the favorable moment, etc. Let us look at the map of the United States and that of Argentina at the time each became independent. What do we find? The Republic of Argentina has lost through arbitration over 29,000 square miles, but the much-lauded isolationist United States has acquired Texas, Louisiana, Florida, the Mexican provinces, Alaska, Samoa, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, the Philippines, Guam and the Canal Zone.

Argentina is a rich country that produces (according to many) a better quality of same products that the United States does. Argentina has never defaulted on a foreign loan; and finally, the Argentine Republic, with her six universities, 600 public libraries, 100,000 teachers and 2,000,000 students, has the right to hope that destiny will keep smiling on her, and that some day all nations will finally really understand the moral conscience of Argentina, and will reach for our hand in the same manner and with the same sincerity that I extend mine to you.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Atomic Fantasy

IN EVERY session a certain number of screwball bills get dumped into the congressional hopper. These are often measures put in as a gesture to pacify some organization or pressure group with no expectation that they will ever be seriously considered.

At first glance, a proposal that died with the Seventy-ninth Congress has the look of a bit of whimsy. But in the fantastic time in which we are living, this proposal may before too long come to seem merely elementary common sense.

The resolution introduced by Representative James W. Trimble of Arkansas provided for a Government of the United States in the event an atomic bomb should land squarely on Washington and wipe out the President, Vice President, all the members of the Cabinet, the entire Congress and the Supreme Court. The resolution proposed a constitutional amendment to be ratified by the legislatures of three fourths of the States.

Under the proposed amendment, if the Government in Washington were wiped out, the first step would be for the top officers of the Army, Navy and Air Forces to choose "a civilian to act as interim President." This is on the assumption, of course, that the commanders of the three services would survive and be in active command of forces in the field.

The interim President is to call a meeting of the Governors of all the States. The Governors will then select by a majority vote one of their number to act as President, and one to act as Vice President. "Those selected by the Governors shall immediately take office and serve for the uncompleted portion of the terms for which the last elected President and Vice President were elected, respectively, at the site selected by a majority of the Governors."

YOU WILL be able to pick it up on your television set—unless, of course, the radioactive effect of the bomb has knocked out all television and radio. The Governor of Illinois is being sworn in as President of the United States in a deep underground shelter at the capitol in Springfield, which, until the war ends in victory and Washington can be restored, will be the Capital of the United States.

As seen on the television screen, the faces of the newly chosen leaders of the country are tense and drawn. The words they speak are measured and solemn. This is the first time that a foreign enemy has carried war to the shores of the United States. And it is war, says the new President, of a more awful kind than the world has ever known; war that will mean further fearful sacrifices from the American people.

A hot weather fantasy? Yes—but if the atomic armament race goes on, it can become reality.

Congressman Trimble says he was reading the Constitution one night when it occurred to him that no provision is made for another Government in the event of the destruction of all the chief officers of the existing Federal Government. The framers of the Constitution could hardly have been expected to foresee the age of mass death. They lived in a simple time when warfare was a matter of individual killing individual on a chosen field of battle. Towns were sacked, but only incidentally and not as a calculated part of strategy.

Nor could the framers of the Constitution have foreseen the great concentration of our economic and political life. That concentration is the direct result of the vast new techniques of power—steam, the internal combustion engine and, now, atomic fission.

THE POWER of economic decision is so concentrated in New York, and the power of political decision in Washington, that it is hard to see how a modern war could be waged if one center or the other were destroyed. For modern war with its intricate technology, necessarily based on a great industrial complex, requires instant over-all decisions. Our industrial concentration in a few centers makes this country peculiarly vulnerable to atomic air attack.

Anyone who thinks Congressman Trimble is dreaming up unnecessary trouble should consider the sober fact that a committee on underground sites named by the Army-Navy Munitions Board is now surveying natural caves and man-made caverns, such as mines, in order to find those adaptable for "vital industrial production and other military purposes."

In the first instance, they would be used for the storage of essential machine tools and critical raw materials. While we are studying ways to hide our machine tools, we might also find a safe place to shelter a substitute Government.

New Army Uniform

Why is the War Department, at a time when the President is demanding a reduction in Federal expenditures, preparing to spend more millions in "blue" uniforms for the Army? Why, at a time when the quantity and quality of men's clothing is of deep concern to millions of us, is a campaign being launched which will take untold quantities of cloth and fittings out of the "civilian" market? Why, when we are informed that the "needle trades" are encountering a constantly decreasing supply of labor, must that problem be aggravated? OSCAR G. IDEN.

Second Lap

By Barnet Nover

Basic Differences Remain Unsolved

NOVER

PARIS—With the adoption of rules of procedure, the selection of a permanent secretariat and the setting up of nine commissioners to deal with the various treaty problems, the Peace Conference has now begun its second lap. After two weeks of frenzied and frequently futile debate over incidentals, it is now getting down to business.

Only an optimist will assume, however, that the pace of the conference, which has been glacierlike up to now, will henceforth be speedier. There is little likelihood of that.

In the first place, not all of the other delegations are as eager as, say, that of the United States, to finish the work that must be done here and go home. That certainly does not appear to be true of the Russian contingent. They are in no hurry. They give the impression that it makes no difference to the Soviet Union whether the settlements with Italy, Romania, Hungary, Bulgaria and Finland are made this month or next, this year or next. Indeed, it is hard to avoid the conclusion that they would prefer to have those settlements postponed so as not to have to withdraw their troops prematurely from the occupied countries.

In the second place there is every reason to believe that the fight which has been raging between Russia and the English-speaking powers on matters of procedure will continue and perhaps in more acute form, now that matters of substance are to be discussed. The fact is—that there is a basic difference between Russia on the one hand and the United States and Great Britain on the other regarding the functions of this conference, and unless and until this difference is overcome through compromise or otherwise, there will be altercations every step of the way.

TO GET Russia to agree to have the present conference held at all the United States and Great Britain had to make a series of important concessions to the Soviet Union. First, they found it necessary to agree at the Moscow meeting of the Big Three to eliminate China as one of the active members of the Council of Foreign Ministers. More recently they had to weaken their original stand on the problems of Trieste, the Italy-Yugoslav frontier and reparations.

The British-American view has been that some of the worst features of the compromise arrangement reached at the last session of the Council of Foreign Ministers might be modified as a result of the recommendations which the conference of 21 nations might make. They have assumed and in this particular Russia seems to agree with them, that such recommendations would have behind them sufficient moral force as to be in large measure binding on the great powers.

The Russians for their part have never been particularly enthusiastic about the conference. They accepted it because it paid them to accept it, but they have never shown the slightest willingness to turn over to the conference any of the peacemaking authority which they firmly believe must rest in the hands of the Big Four.

Realizing that the conference is not likely, given its present composition, to make any major changes in the draft settlements that would be in line with their views or the views of Russia's satellites such as Yugoslavia, their aim is to limit the authority of the conference to that of a ratifying body. Their fight over procedure was basically the product of the fear that the delegates of the small nations would not agree to play any such rubber stamp role.

ADD THE way the conference is organized. Russia is in a position to block any recommendation submitted in any commission, except those dealing with Italian affairs, from securing a two-thirds vote. That is because membership in the commissions is limited in each case to countries that declared war on the particular ex-enemy nation with which the treaty is being considered. Thus the United States is not represented on the commission dealing with the Finnish settlement, while Norway is not represented on the Italian commission.

Actually the Russian position at the Conference is less favorable than her voting strength in the various commissions would indicate, for the work of the various commissions is subject to the review of the Conference as a whole. In the Conference Russia is sure of only six votes, five less than a majority but only two less than she needs to block a two-thirds vote on any issue.

IT HAPPENS that two nations at the Conference, France and Norway, have so far maintained a foot in both camps. They have voted more frequently with Russia, or to put it in another way, have voted less frequently against Russia than have any other countries outside the Russian bloc. On crucial matters, however, their basically Western orientation has been made manifest. Holding as it were the balance of power between the two great blocs, they have been courted by both.

Undoubtedly one additional reason for the dilatory tactics pursued by the Russians here and their insistence that no recommendation be valid that is not approved by a two-thirds vote has been their belief that, given time, they will succeed in swinging France and Norway over to the Soviet side. Should that happen the long record of objection to the recognition of any action taken by the Conference by less than a two-thirds vote would then be called into account.

Whether France and Norway will succumb to Russian blandishment and Russian pressure is, however, anything but certain at this Conference. Certainly the Molotov-Vishinsky team has shown no great capacity to make friends or influence people or countries.

Chinese Martyrs

Secret Police Fell Educators

Editor's Note: The following article is a translation of a speech delivered by Dr. Wen I-to, a leading Chinese scholar and professor in the refugee university at Kunming, at funeral services for Dr. Lee Kung-po in Kunming on July 15. Four hours later Dr. Wen I-to was assassinated by members of the Kuomintang special secret police.

Dr. Lee Kung-po was a member of the Democratic League, which established in protest against the reactionary tendencies of the Kuomingtang. He was one of the seven Chinese leaders who founded the National Salvation Association in 1937 to demand that Chiang Kai-shek oppose the Japanese. He had been active in demonstrating against civil war and had been beaten by Kuomintang agents for publicly hailing the cease-fire agreement of last January. He was shot in Kunming on July 11.

Dr. Wen I-to was an authority on Chinese literature. He held a degree from the University of Chicago, as did his son, who was struck by five bullets at the time his father was killed. The son is still in the hospital with his legs amputated.

ALL OF US know that the meanest and the most shameless act in Kunming's history has happened within the last few days. What crime has Mr. Lee committed to be murdered like this? The only thing he did was to speak out the words which had been long suppressed in the hearts of millions and millions of people. If the reactionaries have reason, why don't they speak out or write about it instead of beating, killing and killing secretly?

Are there secret police here? Stand out! Stand out and speak! Why did you kill Mr. Lee? (Audience roared in echo of the demand, with long and heavy applause.) You killed people secretly. But you continue to smear the dead. You say that it was a romantic story. You say that it was the Communists killing each other. Oh, shameless! shameless! (Heavy applause.) This is the shame of that powerful group. This is the glory of Mr. Lee! The assassination of Mr. Lee in Kunming is the glory of Mr. Lee and the glory of the Kunming people!

Last year, on December 1, Kunming students had been massacred because they were against the civil war. Now, Mr. Lee was assassinated by the reactionaries because he fought for democracy and peace. It is the limitless glory of the Kunming people.

THE REASON for the actions of these shameless thugs is simple. Their insanity and fear show that they are at their wits' end! It is the terror within themselves. Members of the secret police, think how many more days you will have. Truth will triumph definitely.

Those who want civil war counted on a war between the United States and the Soviet Union. But it is not certain yet that those two countries will fight. There is a news blockade in this country. We are not allowed to know the intelligent opinion in the British and American press. The reactionaries here have gone so far that Great Britain, United States and the Soviet Union, during the Foreign Ministers' Conference, did not want China to be one of the summoners of the Peace Conference. It shows that there is not only a limit to he people's patience, but there is also a limit to the patience of the other nations.

WE WILL have a price for the death of Mr. Lee! Four young people fell on December 1. Their blood had brought about the PCC (Political Consultive Council.) Now, Mr. Lee fell. It must bring about another PCC meeting! (Heavy applause.) We have that confidence!

December 1 and the death of Mr. Lee are the glories of the people of the Yunnan Province. Along with the Yunnan Revolution, which was led by Gen. Tsai Ngo (against an attempt to restore the emperior system in 1916), they are all glories belonging to the Yunnan people. We must develop this spirit.

You reactionaries think that since the Southwestern Associated University has moved away, since the summer vacation has sent the students home, there will be nobody here to hinder you. You secret police, look how over a thousand of us are again gathered here with tightly clasped hands! Youth in Yunnan will not let you continue on.

We are prepared to live just like Mr. Lee. When our first foot steps outside of the gate, we don't intend to slip back again! (Long extended heavy applause.)

The blood of the heroes will not be shed in vain! Reactionaries, watch for yourselves! When you see one of us fall, hundreds and thousands more are standing facing you already.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

VIENNA (By Cable). — The place where the United States and Russia have come closest to grips is not Berlin but Austria.

Here the Red army got in first and for a time it kept the other Allies out. Here the Russians immediately appointed their own Austrian government and expected to run it and here—in a little country almost completely surrounded by Russian-dominated Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Hungary—Moscow planned to establish its economic capital for the Danube.

The amazing thing is that with all the cards stacked in their favor the Reds have completely failed. This is due partly to the ruthlessness of the Red army, which has alienated everyone it has come in contact with, and partly it is due to the shrewdness of an American general who has outsmarted the Russians at every turn. His tactics are worth studying. They may be the key which the United States should adopt in other areas, perhaps even as a national policy.

Vienna, of course, is the most famous city in history when it comes to Oriental invasions. For centuries, armies from Asia have swept up the Balkan Peninsula or across the Caucasus in attempts to conquer all Europe—only to be stopped at Vienna.

The Turks came to the very gates of Vienna before they were turned back. The Mongols got as far as Budapest and left behind them the Magyars of Hungary. The Slavs penetrated most of the Balkans but never Austria. Now Vienna is the battleground for another historic invasion—a new Slavic penetration, waving not the banner of the Czar but slogans of communism and determined to swallow Austria and use it as the springboard to the Adriatic, Italy and southwest Europe.

Clark Checked Russians

THE MAN who has chiefly checked this latest invasion is tall, ramrod-built Gen. Mark Clark who, three years ago, landed at Casablanca, fought his way up through Italy, and now commands a small but determined American Army in Austria. On the other side of Austria, a Russian army four times as large as the American force occupies a much larger slice of the nation while French and British armies occupy the rest of Austria. Here in the city of Vienna meets the Allied Council—the real rulers of this beleaguered little nation. Under the Declaration of Moscow, the Allied Council is charged with the building up of Austria on the ground that its people were thrown into war by Hitler without their consent, and that a healthy Austria is also healthy for a democratic Europe. Although the Soviet was a 100-per-cent subscriber to this doctrine, its general on the Vienna Allied Commission has followed exactly the opposite policy.

Aside from shooting at American airplanes, stealing U. S. jeeps, murdering occassional American M. P.'s and blocking U. S. Army transportation, the Russians also have followed a painstaking policy of wrecking the Austrian economy. This is where Clark and the Russians have vigorously come to grips.

At the start of the occupation, for instance, the Russians demanded 900 million schillings to pay for Red army costs in Austria. Since Austria must also pay United States, British and French army costs, this just about bankrupts the country. So Clark has urged, even demanded, that the Russians scale down their occupation costs. Last month this argument finally came to a crisis when Clark proposed that the Russians reduce their costs to 123 million schillings for the next quarter. The Russians, however, said "No"—that 200 million schillings was the least they would take—and they threatened to walk out of the council.

Veto Humbles Reds

CLARK, however, is one American who has found the Russian veto strategy just as useful as M. Molotov. He promptly exercised his veto and told the Russians that they could not have 200 million schillings, whereupon they did walk out.

A couple of weeks passed and the Russians walked in again and meekly said they would now accept Clark's figure of 123 million schillings but the American general was immediately on his feet.

"I'm sorry, gentlemen," he said, "but it's too late now. We can't let you have but one third of the military budget which will be 112 million schillings instead of 123 million."

Once again the Russians walked out. Once again, however, Clark stuck to his veto and a few days later the Reds came back and accepted the lower figure. But to get even with the Austrians the Russians simultaneously put in a bill for 600 million schillings on the ground that they had turned in that amount (in Hitler's old reichmarks) to the Austrian treasury just after the armistice.

Reichsmarks no longer exist, but the Reds said they wanted this money back, whereupon Clark also put in a bill to the Austrian treasury for two billion schillings on the ground that the United States had put that amount in reichsmarks into the Austrian treasury. Clark knew that if he demanded the money back from Austria, the United States demand on top of the Russians, would be so great that neither could be paid.

Most significant thing about Clark's strategy is that he started out by being soft with the Russians. Everything they asked for, he gave. He sincerely believed in strong Russian cooperation and after the war's end he bent over backward to give it. But all he reaped from his favors was rebuffs until, finally, he decided to try different tactics. Now Clark doesn't budge an inch and the policy seems to work better.

'Tough' Policy Works

ONE OF CLARK'S toughest fights was over the return of German nationals or Volkedeutsch, some of whose forebears had settled in Austria 300 years ago, but who were declared Germans by Hitler and now, by a Soviet decree, are to be ousted from the Russian zone. Many of the Volkedeutsch are farmers and the Austrian government didn't want them ousted until after harvest time.

One day General Clark was attending an Allied Council meeting when an aide suddenly thrust a memo in front of him. It reported that 54,000 Germans were being herded by the Russians across the bridge into the American zone. Those in front had reached the middle of the bridge and had been stopped by American guards, but the Russian guard would not let them turn around and go back. There they were, blocking all traffic, unable to move backward or forward. Furthermore, they carried phony American permits.

Hastily, Clark adjourned the Allied Council for five minutes, called out massive Gen. Alexei Zheltov, one-time Soviet wrestler and now a member of the Soviet NKVD (secret police).

"There are 54,000 Volkedeutsch crossing the bridge into my zone," Clark told Zheltov. "They have fake passports given them by you. You know it and I know it. I am not going to let them cross the bridge. If your guards do not send them back, I will call in the press and tell the world exactly what's happened.

A few hours later the long line of Germans was turned back from the bridge into the Russian zone. Clark's policy of being tough had worked again.

'Oklahoma' Tourists Playing a $100,000 Week at Des Moines

THE NATIONAL COMPANY presenting "Oklahoma" on tour is out to put the New York company in its place.

Athough the Theater Guild's world champion musical hit is in its fourth year at the St. James Theater on Manhattan's West 44th st.—182d week I think is the count—the hedge-hopping troupe is about to celebrate an event unparalleled in the history of the American theater.

Gov. Robert Kerr

It seems a little early to say so, but beginning September 9 the touring company will play a capacity week at the new KRNT Theater in Des Moines, Iowa, formerly the Shrine Temple, to a gross of $100,000.

As of now, more than a month before this gala opening, over $65,000 already has been rung up at the KRNT boxoffice in an unprecedented advance sale. This advance "take" tops the biggest gross to date—the $63,364.75 for one week at the Bushnell Auditorium in Hartford, Conn.

With a seating capacity of approximately 4300, the KRNT will be able to accommodate an aggregate audience in excess of 33,600 in its sell-out week. Des Moines' $100,000 gross will be derived from the $3.50 top scale of prices to which the Richard Rodgers-Oscar Hammerstein 2d, musical smash has played throughout the two years it has been on the road.

The September 9 opening in Des Moines will be attended by many of the Nation's notables, with Iowa's Gov. Robert Blue and Oklahoma's Gov. Robert Kerr, the guests of honor. On this occasion Governor Kerr will cite "Oklahoma" as the greatest legitimate attraction ever to appear in the Midwest—and he won't be far wrong, at that.

What a bang the late Will Rogers would be getting out of all this, if he were alive to see it!

Ten boxing matches between local amateur stars, with World's Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis refereeing several of the bouts, is only the groundwork of the elaborate entertainment arranged by the Washington Variety Club for the all-star show to be run off in Griffith Stadium Friday night for the benefit of the Junior Police and Citizens Corps. Chairman Gene Ford of the entertainment committee has rigged up a flock of other novelties to spark and spice the evening. One involves Al Schacht, the greatest clown in sports, who, in a wire to Cochairmen Bill Hoyle and Clarke Davis, has challenged Louis to a fight for the "champeenship." Others who will appear include Herb Shriner, comedian who will be headlining at the Capitol, come Thursday; Kay Ballard, singer, currently at Delmonico's, and an array of talent from the Howard Theater. Gen. Alexander Vandegrift, Marine Corps commandant; Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan, President Truman's military aide, and Mathew Connolly, secretary to the President, have accepted invitations to be guests of honor. Tickets at $1, $2 and $3 are available at the Willard and Shoreham Hotels, Sport Center, 8th and D sts.; Capital Pleasure Club, 1228 U st. nw., and the ball park. The park shouldn't be big enough!

The Gayety Theater will inaugurate its new season of bigger and better burlesque with a matinee performance this Friday, August 16. "Naughty Nifties" is announced as the opening bill, with luscious Jessica Rogers and that veteran comic of vaudeville and the legit, Harry J. Conley, costarred. The principals will be supported by a chorus of 20 lovelies and five big vaudeville acts. Following its usual policy, the Ninth st. palace of pulchritude will present a Saturday midnight show each week.

Bread Upon the Waters

During a mild attack of nostalgia a few days ago, we were wondering what the Aborn Opera Co., might have been presenting at the National 39 years or so ago. Max Fichandler, 3408 13th st., as it turns out, had it all right there in his scrapbook.

The operas presented during the 14 weeks of that summer of 1907—and I have no idea why I picked on that particular year—were "Robin Hood," "The Serenade," "The Mikado," "Pinafore," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Chimes of Normandy," "The Fortune Teller," "Bohemian Girl," "Begger Student," "Fra Diavolo," "Wang," "Dolly Varden," "Maritana" and "Ill Trovator."

"So I take it," says Mrs. Fichandler, "that we were giving 'Dolly Varden' the week you were curious about. The cast included Estelle Wentworth, prima donna; Edith Bradford, contralto; Harold Blake, tenor, and Huntington May, basso."

Now we'll quote the Musical Leader and Concert Goer of that period as to how Mr. Fichandler happens to have that scrapbook: "It is to the tireless efforts of Max Fichandler, the musical director, that the success of these performances belongs in large measure, for had it not been for the thorough musicianship of Mr. Fichandler and the manner in which he won the respect not only of the company, but also of the members of the orchestra, the results obtained could not have been as satisfactory as they were." That is my recollection, too. And wouldn't it be nice if we had something like that today?

Dots and Dashes

"Johnny in the Clouds" roars into its third week at the Little Theater tomorrow, with Michael Redgrave, Rosamund Johns, Peter Mills, Douglas Montgomery, Basil Radford and the others in the cast deserving every minute of it . . . Twentieth Century-Fox has purchased R. A. Dick's "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir" for future production and hopes we'll like the copy of it that hasn't reached the desk yet . . . Next Monday night, Variety Club is stag partying Jerry Price, newly appointed Washington branch film exchange manager for United Artists—couldn't happen to a nicer guy . . . Volunteer Camp Shows and "Entertainments in Washington" auditions for all types of talent at Thomson Center, 12th and L sts. nw., tonight, 7:30 to 9:30.

B. & O. Car Loadings

Baltimore, Aug 12 (AP).—Carloads handled by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad during the week ended August 10 totaled 67,318. This compared with 72,633 carloads handled during the same week in 1945, and 69,113 for the week ended August 3, 1946.

LEONARD LYONS

Millions and the 'Mite'

Leonard Lyons is in Europe. His guest columnist today is Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora who conducted the Senate Investigation of Wall Street.)

New York, Aug. 12.—A few days before he left his den for his current vacation, Leonard Lyons conscripted me to pen a guest column for him. Lyons' fiats are frightening. His punishments are Draconian. Hence I find myself cringingly obeying his imperious command to "write some off-the-record stuff" about the investigation into banking, Stock Exchange and securities market practices which I conducted in 1933-34 before the United States Senate Committee on Banking and Currency as its counsel.

Ferdinand Pecora

Probably one of the most publicized episodes of the investigation was that of the midget sitting on the lap of the late J. P. Morgan. Despite the vast amount of space given to it by the newspapers at the time, it has surprised me to learn, through the intervening years, how misinformed the public mind still is concerning an important feature of that occasion.

The fact is, that the more or less sensational event did not occur during a hearing, nor even in the presence of any member of the committee or of its counsel. It is true that it took place in the hearing room. But the hearing on that morning did not actually open until about one hour after the midget had been brought into her bizarre contact with Mr. Morgan.

Shortly afterward I learned that the person who conceived and staged the spectacle was one of the best known correspondents in Washington. He was actuated by an impish impulse which seized him the moment he spied the midget entering the crowded hearing room as a spectator. It dawned upon his mischievous mind that—to use the words of his own confession to me—"here was an ideal opportunity to have the smallest woman in the world meet the biggest banker in the world." The path of the investigation was not always smooth and clear, especially during its early months. Indeed, an obstruction which I think would have proved fatal to its progress was overcome on the very morning of the midget incident.

At the request of one of its members, an executive session of the committee was held that morning behind locked doors, in a room in the Senate Office Building on the same floor as the Canons Room in which the public hearings were held, but situated a considerable distance from it, near the farther end of a long corridor. I attended that executive session upon the gracious invitation of the late Senator Fletcher, who was the committee's illustrious chairman.

A Senator moved that the committee's counsel be instructed thenceforth 'first to submit his evidence to the committee at private sessions and then to await the committee's decision regarding the presentation of it at public hearings. A heated debate was precipitated which at times became quite acrimonious. Toward its conclusion Senator Fletcher accorded me the privileges of the floor and asked me to state my views on the motion. Thereupon I said, among other things, that the proposed procedure would so hamper me in the performance of my duties as to seriously impair my usefulness to the committee as its counsel; that if the procedure were adopted I would feel constrained to resign; and that I would set forth my reasons therefor in a public statement. This provoked further bitter discussion.

Finally, just before the motion was put to a vote, one of the Senators, who was consistently a stalwart supporter of the investigation, calmly announced to his colleagues that if the motion prevailed, he would reserve the right to make known to the whole country, from the floor of the Senate itself, the substance of any evidence privately imparted to the committee, but which it might decide was not to be entered upon the public record. The effect was dramatic. I shall always have a grateful appreciation of that act on the part of the late Senator Couzens. In my humble opinion he saved the life of the investigation by it.

Meanwhile, in the public hearing room, with the committee and its counsel in complete ignorance thereof, the midget had been perched on Mr. Morgan's dignified knee. We were informed of it by an excited group of newspaper correspondents as we made our way down the long corridor from the executive session to the public hearing room.

Upon opening the hearing Chairman Fletcher vigorously denounced the occurrence. He also requested the press to refrain from publication of any of the flashlight photographs which had been taken of it. However, apparently because of lack of unanimity of opinion among the publishers respecting the reasonableness of that request, it met with no compliance.

The entire affaire was deplorable from every sane point of view. It certainly would not have happened had the committee been present. The only comforting memory I have of it is due to the good nature and admirable sportsmanship which Mr. Morgan displayed about it.

Perhaps in some future vacation season, while Leonard Lyons is roaming around in lands not yet desecrated by his ubiquitous presence, other scraps from the unwritten pages of the investigation will be found littering the floor of his den.

The bayonet was named for the city of Bayonne, France, where the weapon was developed in the 17th century.

Merit Minus Award!

Hollywood, Aug. 12.—It's about time Tom D'Andrea got a better contract. The good dialog in "Night and Day" was written by Tom. He's joined Ida Lupino, Wayne Morris and Dane Clark in "Deep Valley." He plays Benny the Dip. . . . I wish Warners would bring Graham Wahn out here for a visit. He's their New York greeter, with a great big "G," just as Max Milder is in London. . . . Barbara Stanwyck's second picture all set by Charlie Einfeld. It's "Star Crossed" by Ladislas Fodor, who's writing and producing . . . Vic Mature, Burl Ives and Cathy Downs are already set for "The Hollywood Story," which Sam Engel will do, and allow Eddie Goulding to play himself at his regular occupation, directing. Eddie will probably double cross him and burst into song as he used to do with Nora Bayes . . . It's still mooted about that Vic and Cleatus Caldwell will up and marry one of these days. Anything can happen when they sail on the same boat to Honolulu . . . Millicent Rogers, while crossing the desert with the Gary Coopers, looked out the window, then said to Coop: "It's been so long since I've seen this part of the country. Where are the long-horned cattle that used to roam these parts?" Said Coop, "I've lassoed them all in my pictures."

In my gripe corner, a fan wants to know why an English boy played an American Western kid in "Thunderhead, Son of Flicka." But then added, the horses outplayed the humans. Also wants to know why Twentieth Century cast angel-faced Linda Darnell as that glorified wench, Amber. But Tom Leffingwell's test for the new Amber is "pernicious pulchritude." Bank Sees Danger Of Wages, Prices Playing Leap Frog

Philadelphia, Aug. 12 (INS).—The Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia predicted tonight that "if prices and wages continue to play leap frog," the Nation may see again "the type of collapse which followed World War I."

To prevent such a disaster, the institution said in a midyear business review, extreme care must be taken to insure a balance "among wages, production, prices and money supply."

"If cooperation and restraint on the part of business, banking, labor and other groups are obtained," the review declared, "we may be well on the way to economic stability at a level higher than has been known heretofore."

"With the upturn of production in the second quarter of 1946, we have reached a level of national income and employment which is unprecedented in our peacetime history.

"However, the fact that the recuperative powers of this Nation are so great that production records have been attained more quickly than many had anticipated is no assurance that this position will be maintained without vigilance and effort."

Becker & Co. Inc., Chicago, agreed to purchase the stock from the selling stockholders at $2 a share less than the initial price to the public.

Included in the offering are 40,000 shares of stock owned by Charles L. Coughlin, president of the company and agent for the selling shareholders.

Truman Wooes Boss Machine, Reece Says

Helena, Mont., Aug. 12. (U.P.)—Republican National Chairman Carroll Reece told a group of Montana GOP leaders that President Truman "has committed his party to an alliance with the Pendergast (Kansas City, Mo.) political machine on the one hand and the PAC (Cio political action committee) on the other."

Reece, who is touring the Western States in the interest of winning votes for Republican Congressional candidates this fall, charged that Mr. Truman entered the "alliance" during the recent Missouri primaries in which the Chief Executive, the Pendergast organization and the PAC successfully opposed the renomination bid of Representative Roger C. Slaughter (D., Mo.).

"Republican spokesmen have been asserting on numerous occasions that the choice presented to the voters this year is a Republican Congress of a Congress dominated by the Political Action Committee," Reese said.

"Now Mr. Truman has confirmed those Republican essertions.

The Republican chairman said that election of a Democratic Congress in November "would mean a continuation of the fumbling, extravgant dictatorship now functioning iin Washington."

Reece predicted election of a Republican Congress will result in lower taxes, greater benefits for veterans, an end to deficit spending, reduction in the size of the Federal Government, greater protection of States' rights, and an end to "unjustifiable" controls upon production and distribution of commodities.

29-Man Group Named to Speed Distribution

Secretary Wallace announced yesterday creation of a National Distribution Council to work with the Commerce Department to "help American industry improve its distribution capacity and efficiency."

The 29-man council, headed by Raymond Bill of New York, president and editor of Sales Management magazine, is composed principally of business sales executives, described by Wallace as a "voluntary group."

The group's work will be "coordinated with that of Government by Undersecretary Alfred Schindler, formerly a business sales executive himself.

The council's function, Wallace said, will be "to stimulate American business to utilize every practical means whereby America's ability to distribute and consume the products of its farms, waters, mines and factories can keep abreast of America's enormously increased capacity to produce."

"We must," Wallace's statement added, "look forward to the not too distant day when the present sellers' market becomes a buyers' market . . . The National Distribution Council, which represents a voluntary joint effort on the part of business and Government, will contribute greatly to implementing the kind of sales, advertising and other programs which will keep consumption in balance with our increased production."

"I'M A SPARE-TIME SAILOR"

"Getting away from my business is a tough job, but weekends, and when I have an afternoon off, I head for Lake Michigan and my boat. It's only a 37-foot sailboat, but in my harbor (as well as in the three other nearby harbors) are boats of every class. More than 5000 pleasure boats are registered in Chicago alone, and boating is also popular on many nearby lakes in Northern Illinois. I'll bet there isn't another area in the world with such a grand fresh-water harbor at its front door! As far as I'm concerned, Chicago and Northern Illinois is tops for living, working and just plain relaxing."

La Follette's GOP Endeavor Heads Today's Primary Show

By the Associated Press

Senator "Bob" LaFollette, who disbanded his Progressive Party and now is trying for the Republican senatorial nomination, pits family political fame and savvy against a hostile State organization in Wisconsin's primary today.

Vermont Republicans also settle today their scrap over candidates for Senator and governor. South Carolina Democrats pick the winner in an 11-man battle royal for the gubernatorial nomination, with liquor an issue.

But because of its tightness, and tinges of national significance, the main show is LaFollette's attempt to get the nod from Wisconsin Republicans to try for another six years in a Senate where he already has served more than 20.

T odo it, he has to beat Circuit Court Judge Joseph R. McCarthy, former Marine captain, who was the overwhelming choice of the GOP convention, and Perry J. Stearns, Milwaukee lawyer. Former Representative Howard J. McMurray is unopposed for the Democratic nomination.

Politicians interested particularly in national angles have kept an eye on the LaFollette race because of its possible impact on the 1948 Presidential election.

A victory for LaFollette might shake Chairman Tom Coleman's grip on the State Republican organization and put the senator in a position to demand a voice in choosing Wisconsin's 24 delegates to the 1948 national convention.

There have been gestures of friendship between LaFollette and Senator Robert Taft, of Ohio, who has indicated he would not shy away from any Republican Presidential nomination. In contrast, there has been criticism of Harold E. Stassen, Minnesota's Presidential possibility, in the LaFollettee camp.

Democrats hoped the LaFolette contes tmight split Wisconsin Republicans so that McMurray could squeeze through to a victory in November.

Wisconsin's gubernatorial contest parallels the senatorial battle. The present Governor, 83-year-old Walter S. Goodland, seeks renomination. Coleman and the State Convention refused to indorse him. They backed Delbert J. Kenny, an investment banker.

LaFollette handed his support to a third candidate, Ralph H. Immell, former State Adjutant General and veteran of both wars.

Daniel W. Hoan, former Socialist mayor of Milwaukee, has no opposition for the Democratic nomination.

In Vermont, the resignation of Senator Warren R. Austin to become American Representative on the United Nations Security Council left the race for the Republican Senatorial nomination between:

Ralph E. Flanders, CIO-backed industrialist and former head of the New England council and the Boston Federal Reserve Bank, and Sterry R. Waterman, 44-year-old lawyer, who has been active in Young Republican affairs and a member until recently of the State Unemployment Compensation Commission.

Race in Vermont

Mortimer R. Proctor, bidding for the Republican renomination for another term as Vermont's governor, is opposed by former Senator Ernest W. Gibson. Bucking the renomination of the State's only Representative, Republican Charles A. Plumley, is Andrew E. Nuquist, University of Vermont professor of political science.

The South Carolina gubernatorial campaign has been marked by Governor Ransome J. Williams' advocacy of State instead of private liquor stores in what he says is a "crusade" against wholesale liquor dealers making 20 million dollars a year.

One of 10 opponents in the free-for-all to block another term for Williams is Del O'Neal, who demands legalized bars and parimutuel betting. O'Neal used to be an automobile race driver, Hollywood stunt man, and night club operator.

This will be South Carolina's first balloting since the repeal in 1943 of election laws covering primaries, at a time when Negro participation was an issue.

The sailor, Herbert Daniel Giffin, 27, was killed August 5 when hit by a bottle during a free-for-all fight in front of a Great Mills Tavern.

FTC Gas Sale Ruling Compared To Greek Mythology by Mason

Lowell B. Mason, dissenter of the Federal Trade Commission, quoted from Gulliver's travels and ancient Greek mythology yesterday to show that his colleagues were hampering the American system of free enterprise.

I na case involving alleged discriminatory prices in the sale of gasoline, he said an order issued by the Commission reminded him of "the directions the tailors of Laputa used to measure Gulliver for a suit of clothes."

"Gulliver's tailors, immersed in the asbstractions of life, used quadrants, angles and complicated formulae to determine a simple sleeve length. The result was a most ill-fitting suit."

Procrustes Plan Cited

"In my opinion," he remarked at another point, "the Commission in this case has dealt with the facts and the law just as Procrustes dealt with the unfortunate guests who slep in his bed."

(Procrustes was an ancient highwayman who cut of the legs of his guests if they were too tall for the bed.)

Last October 9, the commission ordered Standard Oil Co. of Indiana to cease alleged discrimination in sales of gasoline.

It alleged that Standard was selling to four dealers in the Detroit area at prices "substantially lower" than those charged 358 retail purchasers in the same area. It said Standard classified all four as "jobbers," although three of the customers sold at retail as well as wholesale, while the fourth sold only at retail.

"The price discriminations granted to the four favored dealers," the commission said, "have given them a substantial competitive advantage over other retailers of gasoline."

Order Is Modified

Today a majority of the commission modified the order, explaining that the purpose, among other things, was to make it more specific and to clarify it.

But Mason would have none of it. In his dissenting opinion, he said, "The modified order is too indefinite and obscure to be followed."

The facts are, he said, that some retail gasoline dealers operate wholesale services, too, buying big quantities, either for sale to others, or for sale through their own numerous retail outlets.

"They are like Pooh Bah in Gilbert and Sullivan's opera, the Mikado. It all depends on whether you look at them front or back."

If they can't get a jobber's discount from one company they'll take their trade somewhere else, he said, adding that:

"This all makes life very complicated."

"It is time," he asserted, "that we moved the area of competition back into the open marts of trade where service and price to the consumer are the arbiters of success."

Concluding his 3500-word opinion, he said concerning the majority's decision:

"I am against it."

FALSE TEETH
That Loosen Need Not Embarrass
Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wabbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH at any drug store.

Dodgers Win, Retain One-Point Lead

THIS MORNING

Mr. Governor, You Must Act, Now

With Shirley Povich

A letter to Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor of Maryland:

The Washington Post, reacting to the alarming situation in Maryland racing brought to light by nine horse-doping cases in 9 days at the Bel Air, Md., track, last week undertook its own survey.

POVICH

Racing in Maryland is carelessly administered. The pinch-penny policy of the State, which expends only $30,000 to guard the interests of an industry that last year brought the State $3,817,933, invites the swindlers and racing racketeers who have been plying their trade at the State's tracks.

On March 14, 1945, the Maryland State Senate voted a resolution directing and authorizing you to appoint a five-man commission to study and revise Maryland's antiquated racing laws.

Why did you delay until nearly 11 months later, February 11, 1946, the appointment of the commission that was asked?

In its resolution, the State Senate directed the commission to make a report to you on July 1, 1946.

No such report has yet been made.

More than a dozen State Senators sponsored the resolution. It was carried by a unanimous vote. It was admitted that "the racing laws of the State have been criticized by many interested persons, who charge they are antiquated and outmoded . . . it is essential for the future of racing and the benefit of the citizens of the State that a thorough study be given the racing laws with recommended revisions to be submitted."

As a direct result of the inaction, the Maryland Racing Commission found itself powerless to revoke the licenses of the trainers whose horses were found to be drugged after saliva tests at Bel Air. Those same trainers are said to be running their horses at the current Hagerstown meeting.

The laws under which the Maryland Racing Commission presumed it had power to deal with the dopers were found to be invalid by the State Court of Appeals. There is no assurance that recently drawn new regulations charging the trainers with full responsibility for any horses found drugged will not similarly be found invalid.

The State of Maryland, which draws huge revenue from racing, leaves to the track operators the bulk of the task of keeping racing in the State clean. The State accepts only a ridiculous share of the responsibility.

To police racing in Maryland, the State has been content to go along with an absurdly inadequate force. Aside from its three-man Racing Commission, it attempts to enforce clean racing with a commission auditor, two girl stenographers and a secretary.

In the past, when the Racing Commission believed it was on the trail of suspects, it had no alternative except to call in Baltimore police. It was without police agents of its own in dealing with a business that is infested with the worst kind of thieving rascals who are in readiness to pounce on such a soft touch as Maryland racing has been.

Mayor Theodore Roosevelt McKeldin, of Baltimore, has told The Post that his city is not completely willing to detail its municipal police to doping cases in Bowie, Laurel, Bel Air and other communities far from Baltimore.

Mr. McKeldin, the Republican candidate for Governor in the November election, yesterday expressed himself as "amazed" at what he called "the insignificant figure of $30,000" spent to administer a racing business that last year brought the State $3,817,933.

"The State has a duty to give racing every possible safeguard," said Mr. McKeldin. "Obviously there is a need for wide policing of racing and the most efficient type of racing commissioners."

Mr. Governor, the State of Maryland has declared itself in as a partner in the operation of Maryland race tracks by its tax laws and the acceptance of rich revenues from the races. But the State has been remiss in its duty to the betting public.

The Washington Post suggests:

That the State appropriate funds to provide the commission with enforcement agents of its own, instead of depending on the race track operators to prosecute larcenous elements.

That the State regard the racing commissionerships as full-time jobs to be administered by appointees who have a racing background.

That the State accept full authority for keeping racing clean in Maryland.

That the State take action without delay.

Musial's Bat Paces Cards Over Cubs

Chicago, Aug. 12 (AP).—Stan Musial, the National League's leading hitter, collected three singles and a double for a perfect day at bate today as the St. Louis Cardinals blanked the Chicago Cubs, 5-0.

Musial, who has pounded out 12 hits in his past 14 times at bat in three games, still wasn't the entire show in the Cardinals' fifth straight victory.

He had to share the hero seat with Al Brazle as the tal lleft hander posted his No. 4 victory of the season with a three hitter. Brazle allowed two widely scattered singles and a double. Twice the Redbirds voided these Chicago swats wit hdouble plays as the Cubs had only two runners left on base, none getting as far as third.

Claude Passeau, veteran right hander, started for the Cubs but had to be removed in the third. Attempting to field Marty Marion's slow rolling bounder in opening the St. Louis third, Passeau slipped and twisted his ailing back.

Unable to continue, Passeau was relieved by Emil Kush, and the Cardinals rushed over three runs before Kush could get the side out.

The Cardinals blended Musial and Enos Slaughter singles with two errors by Mickey Livingston and Don Johnson for their fourth run in the fifth. The fifth St. Louis run was osted in the seventh when Musial's fourth hit followed Walker's double aftertwo were out.

Coaker Triplett's Brother Banished

Columbus, Ga., Aug. 12, (AP).—Outfielder Hooper Triplett has ben banished from the Columbus Cardinals on charges that he wagered $20 his team would lose to Columbia, S. C., in a Sally League game August 3, it was revealed today.

Manager Kemp Wicker of the Cardinals disclosed the details of Triplett's case after Sally League directors unanimously upheld his action in suspending the slugging outfielder indefinitely and fining him $500.

League President E. M. Wilder said that the cause of Triplett's punishment should be disclosed in "fairness" to the Columbus club although at the time Triplett was suspended for "infraction of rules."

Triplett, brother of former major league star Coaker Triplett who now is with Buffalo in the International League, was charged with placing a $20 bet against his team with local gamblers.

In the game in question, he walked his rst time at bat, struck out the second time and was promptly yanked by Manager Wicker, who indicated he found out about the alleged bet at that time. He was immediately suspended. Columbus won the game, 5 to 3.

Wilder called the player in for a hearing and although the testimony has not been released, it is understood that Triplett contended he had innocently "fouled up" himself with the gamblers.

A .315 hitter in the clean-up spot, Triplett had shown great promise before the war when he played with the local club in the 1942 season. Out of the Army last spring, he joined the Columbus (Ohio) Redbirds, who are part of the St. Louis Cardinals' system like the club here.

The American Association club farmed him back here for further seasoning and he had been an important factor in the Cardinals' drive to second place in the Sally circuit. He had hit five homers, two triples and ten doubles. The Sally, one of the oldest of the minors, is operating as a class A circuit for the first time.

The 24-year-old player has returned to his home in Boone, N. C., his future baseball career uncertain.

Judge W. G. Bramham, director of the minor leagues, has warned a number of the smaller circuits in the South that reports of gambling among players as well as fans have reached his office and that if the conditions were not corrected drastic penalties would be imposed.

Triplett's is the first specific case of a player being charged with betting against his own club and baseball history apparently has to go all the way back to the "Black Sox" incident for a parrallel. (In 1919 a number of Chicago White Sox players were charged with conniving with gamblers to throw the World Series and they were banished from the game for life. The scandal resulted in creation of Judge K. M. Landis' post, now held by Happy Chandler.)

Shortly after Landis took office Jimmy O'Connell of the Giants was accused of attempting to get Heine Sand of the Phillies to throw a game and O'Connell was banned from baseball.

Detroit jumped into an early lead in the opening frame when Hank Greenberg doubled to left field to score Lake. The Tigers added another in the seventh when Roy Cullenbine drove out his tenth homer of the season.

Benton, who gave up three hits in his nine innings on the mound, was credited with the victory. He was take out for a pinch hitter and relieved by George Caster.

Steve Gromek was charged with the loss. He gave up seven hits and wa ssucceeded by Joe Berry in the ninth.

Faltering Nats Off For Yank, A's Series

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Nats, their grip on fourth place weakened by the onrushing, fifth-place Cleveland Indians, entrained for New York last night and the opening of a three-game series with the Yankees today.

For today's game against the Yankees, Manager Ossie Bluege has ready Dutch Leonard who was withheld from the series with the Athletics in deference to his success against the Yankees in the past.

Then to Philly

The Nats will figure in a night game at Yankee Stadium on Wednesday, and will close their New York series on Thursday before heading for Shibe Park for three games with the Athletics.

Roger Wolff, absent from the mound for two months with the exception of one relief pitching job, is slated to return to action in the Philadelphia series. The club physicia nhas sanctioned Wolff's return to the mound following treatments for injured side muscles.

Pitcher Buck Newsom, most effective on the Washington staff, will miss the Yankee series. Newsom is remaining in Washington for treatment of a leg muscle injury suffered in his stint against the Yankees last week.

Gil Will Stay

Manager Ossie Bluege, pleased with the improved fielding of Rookie Gil Coan who made two superlative catches against the Athletics, now indicates that Coan will be a fixture in the Washington outfield except against left-handed pitching.

Owner Clark Griffith is also enthused about the play of Coan, despite the fact the rookie has not been impressive at bat.

"He's seeing better pitching than he saw in the Southern Association and he has to catch up with it," said Griffith. "But he has a good stroke and I'm confident he'll hit. What pleases me is that his outfielding is improving."

On their brief home stay, the Nats broke even in eight games with the Yankees and Athletics, but 10 defeats in their last 15 contests have threatened their first-division hopes.

Owen Application Sent in by Frick

New York, Aug. 12 (U.P.).—President Ford Frick of the National League today sent Mickey Owen's application for reinstatement into organized baseball back to Cincinnati where Commissioner Albert B. (Happy) Chandler alone will decide whether the 30-year-old catcher should be given another chance with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

"I received the papers in the mail today, certified them and passed them along to Mr. Chandler," Frick said. "I gave no recommendation and will not do so unless the commissioner asks for it. The decision is entirely up to the commissioner."

Gauzza's Big Series Starts

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The annual City Baseball Series, the championship tournament that Washington's sandlot players have been looking forward to all year, begins tomorrow at 4:30 p. m, on the South Ellipse.

But if it marks the official end o fthe sandlot season here, the tourney only begins the busiest three weeks of the year for Vic Gauzza.

Vic, who spends eight hours a day as a salesman in the Atlas Sporting Goods store, is president of the Washington Amateur Baseball Association, sponsor of seven weekday unlimited leagues. Each contributes one team to the City Series.

It's Vic's job to acquire diamonds for the games, to make sure that all the league's have completed their schedules in time for the tourney opening, to check the eligibility of every man on every team, to make umpire assignments, to weigh all protests, and finally to make sure that the series is over by September 3.

On to Harrisburg

That day marks the beginning of another headache for Gauzza. For the winner of the District series goes to Harrisburg, Pa., to represent Washington in the All-America Amateur Baseball Association unlimited tournament for the sandlot championship of the Nation.

And since Gauzza was elected president of the AAABA last Feburary, he must repeat in Harrisburg all that he did for the city series here.

Even all this doesn't summarize Vic's activities for the coming three weeks. For in between times, beginning August 19 to be exact, he will have had to conduct the All-America junior tourney, which takes place here. There are, incidentally, 16 teams in each of these tournaments.

An Old Hand

Being responsible for conducting sandlot tournaments is nothing new to Gauzza, who will celebrate his fifty-fifth birthday at a testimonial dinner next Monday at the Willard. Forty-one of those years have been spent as sandlot player (he was a second baseman), manager and executive, the last 30 as preesident of at least one league.

When Glenn L. Martin formed the All-America two years ago, and he came to Vic for help.

wanted Washington represented,

Doesn't he think he's getting a little old for all this sandlot baseball? After all, this work is done without pay.

"No," is Vic's reply. "My enthusiasm for baseball now is as strong as it ever was. And there isn't enough money in the world that could match the value of the friendships I've made on the sandlots here."

Takoma Challenges

The Takoma Park baseball team desires games with strong unlimited nines. Anyone interested can call Ollie Wilson, SH 8352.

'Bums' Get 3 in 7th to Beat Giants

Brooklyn, Aug. 12 (AP).—Brooklyn's pace-setting Dodgers staged a three-run seventh-inning rally today to defeat the New York Giants, 3-2, before 27,190 fans and hold their slim National League lead over the second-place St. Louis Cardinals who blanked the Chicago Cubs.

Entering what proved to be the "lucky" seventh on the short end of a 2-0 count, the Dodgers shoved their winning markers home on three hits, a walk and an error to retain their 1-percentage-point advantage over the Red Birds.

Pee Wee Reese bunted safely to start the rally. Pinch-Hitter Dick Whitman singled and Reees scored the Brooks' first run when Goody Rosen let the ball get away from him and Whitman went to third.

After Giant Pitcher Ken Trinkle retired the next two batters, Carl Furillo walked and Augie Galan singled to score Whitman with the tying run. Dave Koslo then replaced Trinkle and Pete Reiser greeted him with a single to count Furillo with what proved to be the decided marker.

Ed Stanky, Brookly second baseman, became ill just before his turn at bat in the game today and was replaced by rookie Bob Ramazzotti. Stanky, who was tossed out o fa game with the Phillies yesterday for arguing with Umpire George Magerkurth, complained of an attack of dizziness and nausea.

Three of Cincinnati's hits were doubles by Bert Haas. The Reds' first baseman doubled home the first Cincinnati run in the second inning and got his third two-bagger to start a ninth inning rally that fell short.

Adams Centers Grid Wrangle

Cleveland, Aug. 12 (AP).—Both sides made legal maneuvers today in the argument between the Los Angeles Rams and the Cleveland Browns over the services of Tackle Chet Adams, who figured in talk over the weekend of peace between the National Football League and the All-American Conference.

Adams played with the Rams when the club had its franchise here, and the Los Angeles club recently filed suit to restrain him from playing with the new All-America team headed by Coach-Manager Paul Brown.

Today the Rams' attorneys were granted subpenas for depositions by Adams, Brown, Arthur McBride, president of the local club, and Scout Red Conkright.

The Browns filed an answer to the Rams' complaint, declaring the Cleveland Rams and the Los Angeles Rams were not the same, demanding proof of Adams' exceptional ability as a lineman and kicker of field goals, and denying that Adams was obligated to any Rams other than the Cleveland Rams.

The district court clerk's office reported that no date has been set for a hearing of the case, and that it might be December before it could be reached on the docket.

Yank Park Wasn't Always a Jinx to Williams

His Pre-'46 Mark There Was .380

By Joe Reichler

NEW YORK, Aug. 12 (AP).—It will come as a surprise to many fans, but Yankee Stadium, where the mighty Ted Williams hasn't been hitting his weight this year, actually has been the Boston slugger's happy hunting grounds in previous seasons.

A check into the records shows that Williams, whose batting average for nine games at the Yankee Stadium this season is a puny .111, had, in his first four years in the major leagues, batted a hefty .380 in New York's spacious ball park.

That figure is 21 points higher than he has compiled against Yankee pitching in his own Fenway Park and 24 points above his lifetime .356 batting mark.

In 142 times at bat at the stadium prior to this season, Ted accumulated 54 assorted basehits, including eight home runs and nine double, and batted in 26 runs. He received 29 bases on balls and scored 35 runs.

AT BOTH Fenway Park and Stadium, Boston's pride and first base, slammed 19 of his joy, despite 63 free tickets to 127 home runs against the Yankees and drove in 56 runs.

Williams has never failed to bat over the .300 mark in any year at the Stadium, his best average being .500 in 1941 when he led the American League batters with .406. His poorest percentage was .324 in '42.

It was "The Kid," himself, who caused the above research to be made. Asked at the recent Yankee-Red Sox series in New York to explain why he couldn't hit at the Yankee Stadium, Williams countered:

"Who says I can't hit at the Stadium? Why, I'll wager my lifetime batting average is close to .400 there. You newspaper guys who have been so quick to point out my batting percentage at the Stadium this year, why don't you check back into my pre-war years?

"SURE, I haven't hit much against the Yankees this season," he laughed. "The answer is plain. I haven't seen enough decent balls to hit at, that's all. In the few chances I did have, I caught hold of some pretty good balls, but they either went straight at somebody or the wind checked them and they were caught.

"It's funny," Ted continued, "when I arrived in New York the other day, somebody showed me an advertisement in the newspaper picturing me behind the 8-ball with a caption reading 'whose afraid of the big bad Williams.'

"So what happens? Those Yankee pitchers walk me 18 times in 14 games. Why, I've looked at so many side views of the Yankee hurlers from first and third base this season, I can recognize them by their ears.

"But don't get me wrong," he added hastily, "I'm not complaining. I think the Yankees have darn good pitching and if they believe it wise to walk me, that's all right with me. Walks result in runs and the Red Sox led the league in the standings.

"But," he said as an after thought, "those bases on balls don't help me drive in runs or hit home runs."

Casting Meet Set

By Jack Bell

THE next feature event for fishermen will be the Eastern Registered Casting tournament at the Lincoln Memorial Reflecting Pool, Sunday, August 18.

In the past the National Capitol Casting Club has not received the support it deserved from anglers, mainly because of the entirely mistaken idea that tournament casting is a sport apart from and only distantly connected with angling.

This idea is now generally recognized as false, the skillful use and control of rod and line results in more enjoyable fishing and a better creel of fish.

RUEBAN C. MUSCHLITZ today was the proud champion of the second annual Washington Fishing Derby—he landed the biggest fish of the day, a 36 inch carp, weighing 21 pounds, 4 ounces.

Raymond T. Parker earned an assist on Muschlitz's catch as he did the gaffing.

All of the winners have not been determined but the Department of Commerce probably will take most of the honors although it was the General Accounting Office that conceived the event.

THE setting for the outing was wondeffu at the Tiday Basin wide paved walks, refreshing lawn, beautiful trees. No other city offers such a beautiful spot for the follower of Izaak Walton.

Plaid shirts and gingham were in evidence everywhere, mixed in with the latest fabrics of Connecticut ave. for these were folk interested in the outdoors. Picnic baskets generously dotted the green, mothers with babies in perambulators lolled about.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Stamp of GAO, the only purists to come under our observation, are still nursing sore arms, after two long days of artificial lure casting.

Quartet Will Play Elsewhere

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Revived football hopes at George Washington University suffered a damaging blow yesterday when four seasoned and husky giants announced intentions of playing elsewhere this year.

They are Ends Ed Czekaj and John Miscwicz, and Tackles Ted Hapanowicz and Duke Mesrobian.

Coach "Skippy" Stahley, in his first year with the Colonials as football comes back after a wartime layoff since 1942, called the news "disastrous." He had counted heavily on the four 200-pound former servicemen, three of whom are Colonial lettermen.

"Can't Replace 'Em"

"You can't replace 800 pounds of football talent just like that," he said. "Without those boys our team may be easier to pronounce but it can't be nearly as good."

Czekaj, Miscwicz and Hapanowicz, all juniors plan to return to Penn State where they performed with the Nittany Lions in 1943 as Navy trainees. All three later served overseas.

Played With Penn

Hapanowicz played with University of Pennsylvania as well as Penn State in 1943, due to a Navy transfer, and holds the distinction of having faced the powerful Navy eleven twice that year.

Mesrobian, whom Coach Stahley calls an almost certain All-America selection, will enter Duke University in order to obtain an architectural course G. W. lacks. The 6-foot-2, 255-pound All-High choice at Wilson High School served five years as a Marine Corps flyer during the war. He will be playing his first year of college football at Duke after attending summer school at G. W.

Despite yesterday's loss, student enthusiasm over the new Colonial team is stil lat a fever pitch, Stahley said. The opening of fall practice has been set back a week by the lack of players, from August 19 to August 26.

American Derby Next For Assault

Washington Park, Ill., Aug. 12 (AP).—Robert Kleberg's triple crown hero, Assault, will make his next stakes apperance here in the $60,000 added American Derby August 24.

Trainer Max Hirsch has the Texan training soundly in New York, but does not intend running the three-year-old champion in either of his two stakes engagements at Saratoga—the $30,000 added Saratoga Handicap (which is scheduled the same day as the American Derby) and the $15,000 added Saratoga Cup August 31.

Ernst Entry Wins By Five Lengths

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 12 (AP).—A. C. Ernst's Aladear, lone filly in the five-horse field and also the only non-eligible for next weekend's traditional Travers Stakes, simply jitterbugged her way to victory over the colts in today's featured Saranac Purse before an admiring throng of 12,217.

Third straight odds-on choice to win, the Cleveland color-bearer went postward a 3 to 4 shot under Conn McCreary and completed the one mile distance of the $5000 headliner five lengths on top in 1:38 3/5.

Cat Bridge redeemed for a recent defeat when he was an odds-on favorite. Today he paid $4.50. Approximately 13,500 fans saw the five route runners perform in the feature.

Virginia Roundup

Richmond, Va. (AP).—Milton Parlow, University of Virgiina football star, who was recently declared ineligible for further college competition, will play this fall with the Richmond Rebels of the Dixie Professional Football League.

A 225-pound tackle from Milwaukee, Parlow, a regular on the Cavalier elevens of 1940, 1941 and 1942, played in four Virgina games the last of the 1945 campaign and thus used up his eligibility.

Blacksburg, Va. (AP).—Head Coach Jimmy Kitts will call his Virginia Tech Gobblers together for their first gridiron practice session of the 1946 season August 26. Kitts, who will be starting his second season as coach of the Gobblers after a four-year hitch in the Navy, has sent invitations to 95 prospects.

AMONG the 85 who will report for the early practice are 25 former lettermen, including John (The Greek) Maskas, the 220-pound, 6-foot 2-inch tackle from Monessen, Pa.

Motors, Steels Score Gains In Thin Market

New York, Aug. 12—(AP).—Selected motors, steels and a number of special stocks did fairly well in another "thin" market today although many leaders were unable to attract sound bids.

Earnings and dividends continued to aid individual issues but were ignored by some stocks concerned. Motors and metals stiffened at the last following an OPA boost in automobile ceilings. The question of price controls and decontrols, however, restrained numerous potential purchasers. Liquors moved up on a selective basis as hopes revived for larger grain allocations to distillers. Commission houses reported that customer transactions had dwindled to an extremely unprofitable level and that stock exchange floor trading accounted for much of the slim volume.

Dealings were sluggish after a moderately active start. Advances of fractions to a point or so—there were associated wider jumpers—held a shade the advantage at the cost. Transfers dwindled to 700,000 shares compared with 910,000 Friday and were the smallest since last Monday.

The Associated Press 60-stock average was off .1 of a point at 77.2 of 852 issues registering, a minimum since July 5, 346 advanced and 312 declined.

U. S. Gypsum climbed 5¼ points to $123 on a sharp increase in net. Montgomery Ward added 2¾ at $79 in further reflection of record business. Pfizer was up 2¾ at $77.62, Publicker 1¾ at $61.75, Schenley 1⅝ at $98.12, Hiram Walker 1 at $153, Bethlehem 1 at $112.50 and Chrysler 1¼ at $119.50.

Ahead were United States Steel, General Motors, Goodrich, Sears Roebuck, International Telephone, Westinghouse, Dow Chemical, Owens-Illinois, Pennsylvania Railroad, Chesapeake & Ohio, American Home Products and Air Reduction.

Losers included du Pont, off 2½ at $12.50, and American Can, 1½ at $100. Other casualties were Woolworth, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone, Public Service of New Jerseq, National Power, American Smelting, J. C. Penney, Southern Pacific, Great Northern, National Distillers and Allied Chemical.

...BUT WHEN WE FINALLY GOT TO NASTALTHIA'S HOUSE, THERE SHE WAS ALL DRESSED UP AND WAITING FOR OL' HOTSHOT TO TAKE HER TO THE DANCE! OF COURSE, BY THAT TIME IT WAS SO LATE WE JUST HAD A SANDWICH AND I BEAT IT!

HOW DID IT GO, STAGGING THE PARTY AT THE CLUB? SEE ANYBODY WE KNOW?...
I WONDER IF THE WAR LEFT TERRY A LITTLE BIT DEAF? SOMETIMES HE DOESN'T SEEM TO HEAR THINGS!

Woman Defines 'Sorner,' an Old Word Meaning One Who Imposes Upon Another for Board and Lodging; Puts Uninvited Summer Visitors in That Category

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: "Sorner" is an old word meaning, "One who imposes himself on another for board and lodgings." In my opinion, there are too many sorners in our midst today. I don't mean the luckless veterans,—desperately inconvenienced by the housing shortage.

I mean folks from a distance who have a car and now that the wartime ban on gasoline has been removed, think it would be nice to take a trip. So they drop a line to relatives or friends, announcing the approximate time of their arrival and without waiting for an answer set forth on their journey.

I have one friend who is worn out with a succession of such folk. She has been unable to get help; marketing takes hours and even then she can't always get a really adequate supply of food for her sizable household. I myself in former years suffered much from sorners, until we took a small apartment which automatically precludes overnight guests.

Please write something that will attract the eye of the sorner, appeal to his conscience and make him stay home—or go to a hotel.
C. K.

Benjamin Franklin Was Wise to Breed

DEAR C. K.: Benjamin Franklin; urbane student of human nature, remarked the futility of beseeching mercy from those who perpetrate acts of injustice. Also, it was he who coined the phrase, "Fish and guests smell after three days."

Obviously he'd had some experience with sorners, who aren't likely to be stopped by appeals to conscience,—because if they were sensitive souls they wouldn't be sorners except of desperate necessity. The mark of the sensitive soul is a decided preference for personal privacy, plus a vigilant concern never to trespass upon the privacy of others.

"Actions speak louder than words," says proverb; and action to block his game is the only language that will change the sorner's mind about sponging, when he sets out on his seasonal trek. You've already hit on the invincible technique for balking the breed, which technique consists (1) in eliminating guest space from one's housing arrangement and (2) assiduously emphasizing this fact to distantly located friends and relatives who send out vacation feelers. M. H.

Case in Point; How to Cope?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem isn't one of romance. It is guest trouble. How can one tactfully but effectively rid one's self of a guest who stays on and on? I live in a single-unit apartment, and an extended visit from a girl friend back home—who is also a first cousin of my sister-in-law,—has been exhausting if also delightful.

She is awaiting the discharge of her soldier sweetheart, stationed nearby, and every day or so he assures us that he's sure to be out in another few days. However, I've talked to other veterans recently discharged who say it took them three months to get the final clearance.

Because of cramped accommodations I have only a cot to sleep on. I have nearly three weeks' washing held up, as I hate hanging damp garments around before guests. I am almost sick from lack of privacy and rest. The girl and her beau are delightful to me. They take me out to dinner and share other expenses, but it seems I can hardly hold out any longer. What to do? R. P.

Deal the Guest Poised Dismissal

DEAR R. P.: The girl is doing her best to buy your indulgence of her imposition, which means that she knows she has outrageously overstayed her welcome,—and yet she hangs on for quite self centered reasons. Hence to dislodge her, powers of persuasion more forceful than tact are in order now.

You are entitled to deal her a poised dismissal,—pleasantly phrased, to be sure, but with the "Go now" directive unmistakably clear. You've been ineffably patient and impeccably hospitable thus far, which takes care of all the tact the situation requires of you. Since she is behaving like a child, self engrossed and inconsiderate of you,—except when wheedling tolerance,—take charge of the situation in adult fashion.

Late tonight or early tomorrow, say in effect, "Jane, it's been lovely having you, but all good things must come to an end—and I think it's time you went home. If John gets out in two months he'll be lucky. And in any case, I've got three weeks' laundry to do—so let's call off the vigil." Don't weaken when she sputters and offers to help, as she undoubtedly will. Tell her no, it's time she went home and you're pushing her on the Thursday train. M. H.

What You Do Counts

If Figure's All Wrong! You Can't Blame Baby

By Ida Jean Kain

IT HAS come to the point where women will have to stop those innuendos that the new generation is to blame for their lost figures. There are too many glamour mothers to contradict that easy-going theory—just to name one, beautiful Renee de Marco, dancer.

Renee de Marco

Renee has a 3-year-old daughter and a 23-inch waistline and her weight is exactly the same as before. She weighs 108 pounds for her height of five feet, three and one-half inches, and her measurements are perfect; bust, 34 inches; waist, 23 inches; hips, 34 inches. Her weight is perfect for a dancer.

The woman who loses her figure at this time has been on the way to losing it all along. If she has kept in superb condition, she can continue her usual exercise. But the trouble with the average girl is that she hasn't been taking any exercise and only becomes concerned about her figure during this period. It is too late then to take up any new exercise.

Renee's experience is a strong corroboration of the medical theory that the woman who has been active can safely continue similar activity. She has always been so active in her career that she not only kept on dancing until within six weeks of the date with the stork but kept up such recreations as badminton and swimming. She had her doctor's approval of her entire program. She never lost her figure. There was only a brief break in her activity.

The important thing for the new mother to remember is that it is not until about six weeks after the baby is born that she begins losing her figure. Then the stretched muscles tend to take on fat and the figure spreads. That doesn't have to happen.

The medical profession approves of post-pregnancy exercises. These can be started, in normal cases, within one week after the baby arrives. The beginning exercises, of course, are very mild. But the woman who exercises at this critical stage can have as lovely a figure as ever.

Renee never has to diet. It takes much determination to reach stardom as a dancer and that she has. She doesn't speak of herself as being slim but as being lean and insists that a "good dancer is like a good fighting man and does better when a trifle hungry." But she doesn't overlook the importance of good nutrition and makes it her business to get the right foods. She does have to keep an eye on the baby's weight or she would be too fat, for she is rollickingly healthy and weighs 35 pounds.

Baby's First Taste Counts In Solid Food

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

CEREAL will probably be the first solid food added to the baby's diet. Next will come vegetables. These should be served warm, delicately flavored and finely sieved. They may not be the baby's favorite food, but they'll be acceptable if first taste experiences are enjoyable.

Mother today buys her baby's fruits, vegetables, meats and custards in cans or glass jars. She knows these are prepared of superior materials and the convenience and variety are both influential factors.

Sometimes it helps baby to become used to vegetable flavors if a little of his milk formula is mixed with them. This thins the vegetable and it goes down more easily. Later the vegetable can be served alone. If the formula is omitted, the vegetable should be tasted by the mother to be certain it has a pleasant taste. She may find it improved by a little salt.

Give one teaspoon of vegetable—to begin with—along with the 2 p. m. bottle or nursing. Increase this amount gradually but do not be too much disturbed if the vegetable can be discerned in the stool. It has a slightly laxative influence, too.

There is no way of knowing how much vegetable the child will accept at any one meal. Some children take a tablespoon or so. Others can consume the contents of a whole small can. All solid foods will be taken in variable amounts by different children. In the main one should aim to balance the diet with food and milk and if there is too much milk the child will automatically cut down on his solid foods. He should be able to drink all of his milk, along with the solid foods he accepts without forcing.

Carrots and spinach used to be the two first vegetables offered. Spinach has taken a back seat these days and all mild vegetables are favored above it. Those provided in cans will all be interesting to the baby if he is given a little time to warm up to them. Most babies are suspicious of new flavors.

If garden vegetables are used, they should be young and fresh and after cleaning and cutting into small pieces be steamed until tender enough to sieve.

Town Talk

By Eva Hinton

PERHAPS the best summer vacation is just staying in Washington enjoying the exceptional Washington climate, and reading letters from friends in far-off, glamorous places. Enchanting Mrs. Julius Wadsworth writes from Mexico asking for an extra copy of the guest column she wrote last month for Town Talk. "I love to see my name in print, if it HAS to be," she comments with delightful frankness. "Anyway, I've forgotten what I wrote!"

What she writes now is that "Mexico City is one of the most fantastic places I've ever been in, a mixture of Paris, Shanghai, Los Angeles and the Great Open Spaces. You never can imagine what you are going to see next in the street!

"Yesterday I saw two miniature carts pulled by white goats and decorated with flowers. Each cart held a perfectly beautiful child shepherded by an Indian in a serape and sombrero. All this on Avenida Lusurgentes, one of the principal thoroughfares! It wasn't supposed to be a show and no one except me found it so.

"We had a charming, protocol luncheon Saturday with the Nino Nasellis (she is the former Helen Wardman of Washington) and spent that evening with some Mexicans we had only just met.

"The contrasts here are terrific and everything is expensive, but EVERYTHING! Archeologically Mexico is fascinating and some of the towns, on hillsides, are utterly beautiful and captivating."

Mrs. Wadsworth goes on to speak of their return to Washington "next spring," which is a shock to friends who had hoped to see them back in their Sheridan Circle house by autumn.

HANDSOME Mme. Jean van Kaathoven has left Washington for a month's visit in California with her daughter, Mrs. von Briesen. Dr. von Briesen, a well-known brain surgeon, is just out of the Navy. The von Briesens and their four lively youngsters live near Beverley Hills.

Mme. van Kaathoven's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Barklie McKee Henry, are spending the summer doing over the house they recently bought near Princeton. And, I hear, the workmen are being told that the nursery has priority over every other room in the house!

ADD to the list of summer bachelors amiable Ralph Hobhouse Lloyd-Thomas of the British Embassy. While his pretty, blond wife is visiting at home in England, Mr. Lloyd-Thomas is commuting to The Plains, in Virginia, where they have taken a house for the summer.

Gen. and Mrs. Raymond Lee are summering in Maine while work is in progress on their Georgetown house. Furnished with beautiful antiques, the Lees' house is one of the loveliest in Washington and has been lived in all too rarely by the popular owners of late years. Their welcome home will be a warm one when they return in the fall.

AT ONE of those jovial Press Club parties that one hears about but never sees, a city detective was among the guests. He took a great and friendly shine to one of the journalist members. Not to be outdone in hospitality the detective invited his new friend to "Come down some Saturday night and we'll go around and kick in a few doors."

Pen Women Slate Meeting Thursday

A special meeting of the national executive board of the National League of American Pen Women will be held at noon Thursday at the Willard Hotel. Applications for membership will be considered.

Dr. Margaret H. Sebree, first vice president, will preside in the absence of the president, Mrs. Alma Robison Higbee.

Your Questions On Homemaking

I recently bought a fuchsia wool suit. Can this be dyed black? Will it spoil the material?
M. S. L.

The suit can be dyed black but don't attempt to do it yourself. Wool shrinks if not properly handled and only an expert dyer should attempt to do the work. The material won't be spoiled if the job is properly done.

Could you tell me how to remove a spot of mineral oil from a piece of cowhide we are tooling? How can I clean my brass ashtrays? A sterling silver shell has black spots on it—some pretzels were left in it a couple of days. Silver polish won't touch the spots. D. B.

1. Reliable leather repairers assure me there is nothing you can do to remove the mineral oil from the leather, since it has soaked into the fibers.

2. There are three types of finish you might apply to your brass ashtrays—bright, soft dull or antique.

BRIGHT FINISH—Apply a good quality metal polish with soft cloth. Use soft brush on designs. Let polish dry and rub with a soft cloth to a deep luster.

SOFT DULL FINISH—Add linseed oil to rottenstone until mixture is like heavy cream. Apply with soft cloth and rub until tarnish disappears. Wipe off with soft cloth dipped in linseed oil. Wipe off excess oil and rub with flannel polishing cloth.

ANTIQUE FINISH—Rub with lemon oil or furniture polish. Remove excess oil or polish with soft cloth.

Another method—Use paint remover, then polish with pumice and water.

3. Sterling shell: The spots on the shell have been caused by the salt in the pretzels. Corrosion has occurred and since you've unsuccessfully tried removing spots with silver polish the only thing I can recommend is buffing, which must be done by a professional silversmith.

Will you advise me what I can use to clean the upholstery of a chair? Is ammonia advisable? Although I do not know what our neighbor used, her chair smelled like wet fur thereafter. G. B. H.

Your neighbor undoubtedly made the mistake of many amateurs—she allowed the filling to get wet. I wouldn't advise ammonia to clean the upholstery.

Smooth fabric upholstery may be cleaned with an all-purpose cleaner like carbon tetrachloride, others with soap suds. Avoid cleaners with a water base.

Don't attempt to shampoo velvet, velour or other pile fabrics, except mohair. Test the upholstery in an inconspicuous place to see if the color is fast.

Clean upholstery with vacuum or brush. Dissolve ½ cup mild soap in 1 quart boiling water. Cool until jellied. Beat the jelly to a stiff lather with egg beater. Be sure no liquid is left.

Scrub the lather over a small area with a stiff brush, using a circular motion. DON'T GET THE FILLING WET! Scrape off lather with spatula. Remove soap traces with clean cloth or spong wrung out of clean lukewarm water. Repeat, starting within the cleaned area. Hasten drying by using an electric fan or blower attachment of vacuum cleaner. If greasy spots remain, sponge with carbon tetrachloride. Brush to raise nap only after chair is thoroughly dry.

You may prefer to use a commercial soapless lather to shampoo furniture. If so, follow directions of manufacturer carefully.

Be SMART

ONE RESULT of the pursuit of higher learning is a new appreciation of the qualities of soft wool shirts. The more impressive the color and size of plaids or checks, the higher the rating!

Beyond the hills

Today I climbed the purple hills . . . That leaned against the dawn . . . To keep the picture of your face . . . Until the night was gone . . . I saw it in the dying dusk . . . When shadows moved about . . . And somewhat later on when all . . . The silver stars came out . . . I seemed to hold it in my hands. . . . As though it were my own. . . . I kissed it lovingly and yet . . . I felt so all alone . . . Because I knew that after all. . . . You were not really there. . . . And I had no assurance that . . . Your love was mine to share . . . But as I climbed the purple hills . . . Before the sky was blue . . . My loneliness reminded me . . . That I belonged to you.

BARNABY — By Crockett Johnson

I'm happy to report, m'boy, that the vote was unanimous. The Little Men's Chowder and Marching Society backs your father to the max. We'll be at the rally, of course. Bands playing. Banners flying—But wait!
There was a parliamentary shenanigan. A rider to the resolution was also passed. Stipulating that a special section at the meeting be reserved for our members.
Unless this condition is met, we'll be forced to withdraw our support. Your pater, I'm sure, will comply with this very reasonable request . . .
I'll wait for his answer.
Okay, Mr. O'Malley.
